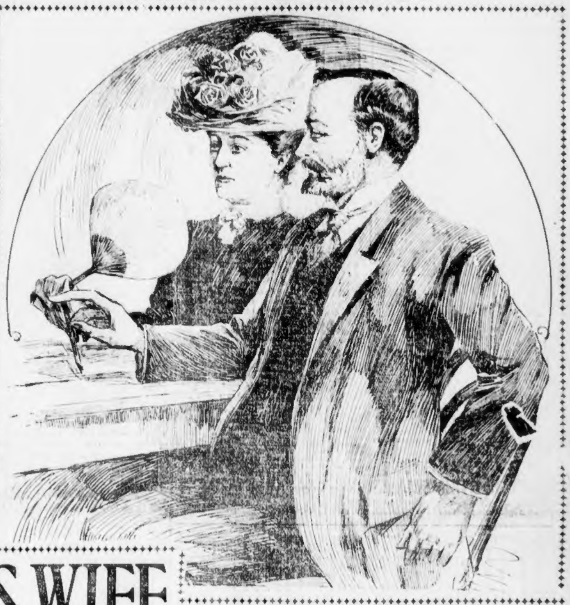
GAMBLER M'DONNELL MURDERED BY HIS FRIEND IN ALBANY.

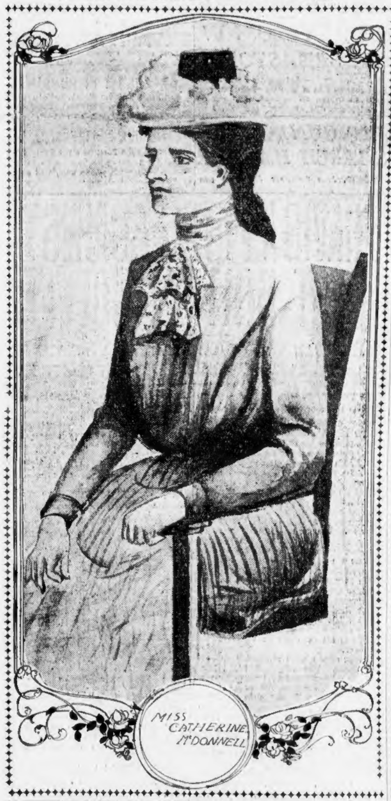
FORETOLD DEATH IN A JEST TO HIS WIFE

M'DONNELL AND HIS WIFE IN COURT.



This sketch of Miles McDonnell and Mrs. McDonnell was made at the time McDonnell was on trial in New York for the murder of George Price, his friend.

MILES McDONNELL'S DAUGHTER.



MILES M'DONNELL'S YOUNG SON.

THOMAS EDWARD M'DONNELL

Had Telegraphed to Wife in His Sister-in-Law's Name, "Mac's Dead; Come at Once." Laughed Over Telephone With Wife at Joke—Shot to Death a Few Hours Later, as He Shot His Friend Geo. Price

MILES B. McDONNELL, HEAD OF THE METROPOLITAN STOCK EXCHANGE SINCE HIS ACQUITTAL OF THE MURDER OF GEORGE PRICE IN NEW YORK, NEARLY THREE YEARS AGO, WAS HIMSELF SHOT TO DEATH EARLY THIS MORNING, IN THE HOTEL TEN EYCK IN ALBANY. HIS MURDERER, RICHARD E. PREUSSER, AN ALLBANY BROKER, HAS BEEN SENT TO JAIL, CHARGED WITH MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE.

The wife and children of McDonnell reside in a handsome home at Jamaica Plain. From Mrs. McDonnell it was learned to-day that the trouble probably grew out of the care of Fred L. Train, formerly manager of the Metropolitan Exchange, now in the insane pavilion of the Albany Hospital.

In jest McDonnell foretold his own death. Before leaving home yesterday afternoon he said to his wife:

"I'LL BET YOUR SISTER WILL VISIT US ON WEDNESDAY."

To win his wager, he wrote and signed his wife's name to the following telegram:

"MAC IS DEAD. COME TO ME AT ONCE."

LEARNED IT WAS A JEST.

When she received this telegram in New York Mrs. McDonnell's sister at once started for Boston. While waiting for a train, however, she wired for verification and learned that it was a jest. To-day Mrs. McDonnell, heart-broken at the crushing news of her husband's death, sent her sister the exact duplicate in words of the death message.

Since his acquittal, after a sensational trial in New York, of the murder of George Price, a fellow-gambler, in a Harlem saloon, McDonnell had made his home in Boston. He was brought here to succeed Train as manager of the Metropolitan Stock Exchange. Train's insanity was the cause of his being committed to an insane asylum in Westboro, from which he escaped a year ago.

TRAIN THE CAUSE, SAYS MRS. M'DONNELL

Mrs. Miles B. McDonnell refused to believe that her husband had been killed today when informed of the tragedy in Albany.

"I cannot believe it," she said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "I don't

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED AT CRIPPLE CREEK.

COUNTY DECLARED IN A STATE OF REBELLION

Mine Owners, Backed by Soldiers, with Hempen Ropes, Scour Region, Menace Officials, Force Them Out.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

VICTOR, Col., June 8.—At 2 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning, upon the arrival of Adjutant-General Bell, the Cripple Creek district was declared under martial law and in a state of insurrection. It is believed that the troops from around the State will again be put in the field for another long stay.

Adjutant-General Bell was accompanied from Denver by five officers. He at once assumed command and caused the posting of a proclamation in various parts of the district. The proclamation states that because of the presence of a class of lawless men and the fact that murders and rioting have taken place and because lives and property are in constant danger, it is considered expedient to proclaim martial law in the district.

Miners Gathering in Force?

The paper is signed by Acting Governor Warren A. Haggott, in the absence of Governor Peabody, who started from St. Louis for home last night. The first movement of General Bell was to begin a personal investigation of a report that had been circulated all night that the miners were gathering in force at a stronghold in the hills near Victor.

Every union miner, it is declared by the mine owners, will be deported by force. The soldiers made a raid on the headquarters of the miners' union and seized all the books of the union, turning them over to the Mine Owners' Association. From these books the mine owners are obtaining the names of all union members, and every member, it is asserted, is to be driven out of the mining regions.

The mine owners, backed by the soldiers, have taken the law into their own hands. Displaying hempen ropes, noosed at the end, they have forced all city and county officials distasteful to them to resign immediately under threat of being lynched immediately if they refused.

GOMPERS LAYS ALL BLAME ON PEABODY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, to-day denounced Governor Peabody, of Colorado, as responsible for the reign of terror in that State. He called the Governor a flagrant violator of civil laws and human rights.

Voluntary arbitration of the labor difficulties and a special session of the Legislature to investigate the Governor, General Bell and the officers of the Miners Federation, Mr. Gompers suggests as a solution of the situation. As for the dynamite outrage he had only words of denunciation. "I cannot believe," continued Mr. Gompers that such an act of lawlessness was the result of any prearranged plan of any body of miners. It must have been an individual act."

FORCED TO ACCOUNT FOR THEMSELVES

TELLURIDE, Col., June 8.—Crowds have been gathering before the bulletin boards containing news from Cripple Creek and some feeling was displayed.

Lest trouble should result from a too free discussion, Captain Wells, in command of this district, began rounding up the men until he had marched between sixty and seventy to the district courtroom. Each man arrested was compelled to give an account of himself. The majority made a satisfactory showing to the captain and were released.

PLACE NO LONGER SAFE TO UNION MEN

DENVER, Col., June 8.—Twenty-four deported union miners from the Cripple Creek district have arrived at Denver.

In the rear of the car stood nine guards armed with shotguns and army rifles. The miners were unarmed. Nearly all were penniless. The men were met by about forty of the delegates to the convention of the Western Federation of Miners and were taken to a restaurant.

The miners declare that the Cripple Creek district is no longer safe for union men.

"Anyone who has an enemy," said one, "had better get out, for it is impossible for him to be protected there now."

The miners assert that when arrested they were searched by guards of the military and Citizens' Alliance, and their money and valuables taken. They also declare that before they were placed on the train they were lined up by armed members of the Citizens' Alliance and their federation cards taken from them.

They were told that they were wanted in Cripple Creek, but that they must take out cards in the Citizens' Alliance to stay. If they did not consent to do this, they were to be deported.

NEGRESS HELD IN $50,000; CROWD CHEERS

Howling Mob Follows Mrs. Hannah Elias to Tombs and Throw Stones at Her.

SHE CANNOT FURNISH BAIL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 8.—After being held in $50,000 bail at a hearing marked by unparalleled demonstrations, Mrs. Hannah Elias, alleged blackmailer, was removed to the Tombs to-day through a crowd of thousands, who threw sticks and stones at her, who called her vile names and shrieked curses at her. The police had to use their clubs to make a passage for their prisoner through a howling mob of men and women.

When the magistrate at the Mercer Street Police Court announced his decision to hold the negress accused of duping the venerable John R. Platt, a volley of cheers burst out in the courtroom, despite the efforts of the police to preserve order.

Mrs. Elias was unable to furnish the money and was consequently imprisoned.

The arrest of Mrs. Elias was made only after the massive oval doors of her palatial residence, at No. 236 Central Park West, had been smashed and four detectives and two assistant detectives ended the long siege.

Mrs. Elias was sitting on the edge of a bed. She wore a plain wrapper. She was self-possessed and seemingly had prepared herself.

"I'm not going to make a fuss. I haven't done anything wrong and I will go with you," she said.

Written across the back of Magistrate Ommen's warrant was "This to be served to-night." The warrant charges Mrs. Elias with the extortion of $7,000. This is part of $15,500 which Mr. Platt in his civil suit says that the negress got from him in May last. The warrant was issued under Sections 552 and 553 of the penal code. The first named section deals with extortion by force or fear and the other includes threats to "expose a secret" affecting the complainant or any relative of his.

It was because of threats, Mr. Platt told the District Attorney, that Mrs. Elias got most of the money he said he gave her in May.

MAY SEAL PORT'S FATE IN LAND AND SEA FIGHT

INCESSANT FIRING HEARD SINCE SUNDAY—FALL SAID TO BE IMMINENT.

LONDON, June 8.—A Rome dispatch from Yin-Kow, Manchuria, this morning, says that an attack on Port Arthur has been proceeding since Saturday from both land and sea. It is asserted that the fall of the fortress is imminent.

A report to-day at Chefoo says the Japanese forces occupy a semi-circle line twenty-four miles long near Port Arthur, and have mounted heavy guns on neighboring heights. These long ranges permit great convergence of the Japanese fire, while the fire of the Russians is scattered against a wide circumference.

Earlier dispatches to-day and those of yesterday from Chefoo and neighboring places tend to confirm the report of a fierce conflict by land and sea at the Russian fortress. Firing has been heard by junks and steamers passing the end of the peninsula almost incessantly since Sunday night.

The Russians, it is said, in desperate straits, have been active in the work of clearing the harbor channel of obstructions in order to get out and give open battle to Togo's ships. One report stated that the sortie had been made, and a naval battle fought, with results unknown.

EXPECT BATTLE NEAR LIAO-YANG

LONDON, June 8.—Lack of news from the Liao-Yang theatre of operations is increasing the tension in St. Petersburg war circles, where the opinion prevails that a conflict between Kuropatkin and Kuroki is close at hand.

The fact that outpost skirmishes, which were quite frequent, have ceased altogether is taken as an indication that the two armies are facing each other and may engage in general conflict at any moment.

Russians are sanguine of the result, believing that Kuropatkin's fortifications and reinforcements at Liao-Yang will prove a stubborn if not disastrous barrier for Kuroki's men.

SHIP EXPLOSION AT SEBASTOPOL

PARIS, June 8.—A telegram from Sebastopol reports that a serious explosion, supposed to be due to malevolence, has occurred aboard the cruiser Smolensk.

JAP GUNBOATS SEARCH HARBOR

TOKIO, June 8.—Four Japanese gunboats made a close reconnoissance of Port Arthur on Monday for the purpose of examining the entrance to the harbor. They were exposed to a severe cannonade. Gunboat No. 4 was hit eight times and sustained some damage. One sailor was killed and two wounded.

FIRED 150 SHOTS AT ETZEL JUNK

NEW-CHWANG, June 8.—At the inquest conducted by United States Consul Miller on the death of Etzel, the American who was correspondent of the London Telegraph, Ernest Brindle, of the London Daily Mail, who was with Etzel when he was shot, testified that their junk was unchallenged by the soldiers and was fired upon, in spite of the fact that the two foreigners were plainly visible, at a distance less than 100 yards. At least 150 shots were fired at the correspondents' junk, which did not reply.

Consul-General Miller will forward his report to United States Minister Conger at Pekin.

Etzel's funeral was held this afternoon.

RUSS TORPEDO LOST IN SORTIE

ST. PETERSBURG, June 8.—Viceroy Alexieff to-day makes the following report to the Czar:

"Rear-Admiral Wittsoeft reports that the gunboat Bobr strongly supported our right flank in the battle of Kin-Chou, aided by the torpedo boats Bourney and Boyky."

He further reports that on May 26 ten torpedo boats were sent out against the Japanese. While returning one struck the rocks and sank. The crew was saved.

300 RUSSIAN JEWS DESERT.

WARSAW, June 8.—Three hundred deserters from the Russian Army, mostly Jews, including a captain and a colonel in uniform, have escaped from the barracks here and crossed the Austrian frontier.

BALLOON FOR RUSSIANS.

WARSAW, June 8.—A balloon attachment, 140 strong, has left Warsaw to join Kuropatkin's army in Manchuria.

REVIVE RELIEF STORY.

PARIS, June 8.—The Petit Parisien's St. Petersburg correspondent says General Kuropatkin, with 40,000 men, will attempt to relieve Port Arthur.

LITTLE SCHOOL GIRL CRUSHED UNDER CAR

THREE-YEAR-OLD DYING AT HOSPITAL, MASS OF BRUISES AND BROKEN BONES.

Crushed under an electric car, three-year-old Fanchon F. Thompson, of No. 214 Northampton street, is dying at the City Hospital.

Stricken down in the midst of her play, but a few steps from her home, she was taken from beneath the car which virtually had to be lifted off the tracks, a mass of broken bones, cuts and bruises, and suffering from terrible internal injuries.

She had just left the Everett school kindergarten for home, when an outward bound Cambridge car came along. Fanchon, who was playing with other children in the street, darted in front of the car without seeing it, and was pined beneath the trucks.

The passengers poured forth in an excited crowd, and by their combined efforts raised the car from the child's mangled form.

At the hospital it was at once seen that the child could not survive her injuries. An examination disclosed a fracture of the right thigh, and internal hurts which could only have one result. The right leg, jaw and nose were also broken.

No arrests were made.

TIGHTEN GRIP ON BRIGHAM

Special to the Boston American.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 8.—Charles Brigham, the young man in jail here for the alleged murder of aged Celia M. Smith, of Windham, spends most of his time pacing his cell whistling. The prisoner apparently does not appreciate the seriousness of his position. He is cheerful and really seems to enjoy the notoriety that has come to him.

Deputy Sheriff Scott, who has been in Boston, and Deputy Sheriff Nelson, who has been following the case in Nashua, Londonderry, Lynn and Cambridge, have returned, and it is understood that they have succeeded in placing Brigham much closer to the Smith homestead than was first known.

CUPID WINS, SHARKEY WED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Cupid got a strangle hold on Tom Sharkey, and holding tightly, threw him in front of an altar. It was a hard tussle, and, finding himself mastered, the giant gave up the fight. There were few witnesses and no gate receipts at all. In other words he is married.

The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock yesterday, the bride being a handsome Michigan girl, who for some months past has been employed at the Hahnemann Hospital. Her name was Miss Catherine McIntosh. She was a trained nurse. Not long ago Sharkey was one of her patients and fell in love with her.

Rev. Dr. F. C. Lennon, pastor of the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, performed the ceremony in conformity with the rites of the Catholic Church.

DOCTOR FOR PERDICARIS?

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Admiral Chadwick cables the Navy Department from Tangier that he has been informed that the captives, Perdicaris and Varley, are in urgent need of medical assistance.

Consul-General Gummere has sent to Raisuli, the chief bandit to inquire whether a surgeon will be given safe conduct. If so, one will be sent in company with the Sheriff of Wazan. Raisuli's reply is expected to-morrow.

It is learned that a message is on its way from Tangier to Paris setting forth the Sultan's intentions with respect to the release of Perdicaris and Varley.

The object of the association is the education of its members in steam engineering, the distribution of information to the trade, assisting members to obtain employment and securing the enactment of laws for the protection of life and property.

An exhibition of steam valves, packing, supplies and appliances used in the engineering business is open to members. NEW WITNESS MAY GIVE LINK IN ALIBI OF TUCKER

American Finds Man Who Says He Saw Him Near Cutter's Corner Time of Murder.

A new witness, whose testimony may clear Charles L. Tucker of the charge of murder, has been discovered by the BOSTON AMERICAN, in Daniel Connolly, of 36 Charles street, Auburndale.

Connolly declares that he saw Tucker on East Newton street within ten yards of Cutter's Corner, at about 12:15 p. m. on the day Mabel Page was murdered. Tucker was walking in leisurely fashion down East Newton street in the direction of Newon Lower Falls.

This provides a link in the chain of Tucker's alibi at the point where it was most needed.

"This is a glorious piece of news," declared James H. Vahey, senior counsel for Tucker. "Tucker's alibi cannot now be broken."

Many Connolly Witnesses.

The names of three other Connollys had previously appeared in the case. The other three had been seen over and over again by the reporters and the lawyers. Their names were Patrick, John and Sarah. All four Connollys were summoned before the Grand Jury. When the attorneys saw the name of "Daniel Connolly" printed in the list of witnesses they immediately assumed that Patrick or John was meant.

In company with an AMERICAN reporter, Thomas F. Vahey and Walter F. Tucker visited Daniel Connolly in Weston, where he works on the farm of Silas Cutter. It was a remarkable story told the AMERICAN by Connolly.

He is a laboring man, about fifty years of age, and is the father of Sarah and John Connolly, whose names have frequently been mentioned in connection with the case. He is in no way related to Patrick Connolly, who is Judge Bennett's coachman.

Kept Out of Way.

"I have never before been spoken to about Tucker," said Connolly "I took good care to keep out of the way, for I didn't want to get mixed up in the case. Sure, I didn't want a lot of reporters running to my house and bothering the life out of me.

"So I told Sarah and John to keep quiet and say nothing about it. The reporters learned that my daughter Sarah had seen Tucker on Charles street about 12:50, as he was returning home. But they didn't know that I had seen him up near Cutter's Corner about fifteen minutes past 12.

"I told Silas Cutter about having seen Tucker, and I also told Patrick Connolly, Judge Bennett's man. He was the fellow who told Judge Bennett, and the Judge told the police, and that's how I came to go to East Cambridge to testify before the Grand Jury.

"I was perfectly willing to go when I found out how important my testimony would be. It wasn't because I wasn't willing to help Tucker, for I've known the lad for six years. But I didn't want to get mixed up in the affair.

"On the day Mabel Page was murdered I was working down in the field between the Page house and Cutter's house. I left my work at 11:55. I am positive of that, because I looked at my watch.

Heard Whistle Blow.

"I allowed five minutes to get to Cutter's house, where I was to eat my dinner. That's why I quit at 11:55. I walked slowly up through the field and arrived at Silas Cutter's house at just 12. I remember hearing the 12 o'clock whistle blow as I sat down to eat my dinner.

"I found my dinner set out for me that day on a barrel in the cider mill. The mill door was open and I sat on the barrel and ate. I was at that time facing East Newton street and could see all that was going on.

"I must have finished my dinner in ten or twelve minutes. I never take a longer time than that when I am alone, and I didn't on that day.

"Just after I finished eating I looked out and saw Charlie Tucker walking along on the further side of East Newton street, going down toward Newton Lower Falls. When I first saw him he was about ten yards from the corner. He didn't appear to be in any hurry and he certainly didn't act excited.

"He was walking along just as anyone would walk who was out for a stroll.

"I didn't speak to him nor he to me. I'm sure he didn't see me. I would have spoken to him, but I was a little too far off."

"Could Not Be Mistaken."

"I know Tucker well. I know him better than I do most of the young fellows in Auburndale.

"There was no mistake about it's being Charles Tucker, and there can't be any mistake about the time I saw him. At any other time of day I wouldn't have been apt to look at my watch. But it was noon, and that's how I am so sure of the time."

Daniel Connolly's story has been eagerly seized upon by the attorneys for the defence. They reason that since Tucker was seen walking down East Newton street in a leisurely manner at about 12:15 it would have been a physical impossibility for him to have been at the Page house, for it can be proved that he was on the Weston bridge, near Auburndale, at about 12:05.

The distance between the Weston bridge and the Page house is something over a mile. Tucker would have had to walk that distance, enter the house, murder the girl and get back to Cutter's Corner, all in about ten minutes. Various persons have estimated that it would require at least thirty minutes of smart walking.

Corroborates Tucker.

Connolly's story seems to bear out that told by Tucker himself. Tucker said that he went out South avenue to Cutter's Corner, and, turning the corner, went down East Newton street to the Boston & Albany railroad track, and thence home.

He has declared he took the walk to find out if there was any shooting of clay pigeons going on at the gun club grounds. Until recently no witness has been found who had seen Tucker on East Newton street. The vital point in the alibi is whether, on arriving at Cutter's Corner, he took East Newton street, as he says he did, or kept on down South avenue to the Page house.

No witnesses have yet been found who saw him on South avenue south of Cutter's Corner. Daniel Connolly makes the second witness who says he saw Tucker walking toward Newton Lower Falls along East Newton street. The other witness is Denis Doyle, who declares that Tucker passed his house about 12:20. The distance between Cutter's Corner and the Doyle house is about five minutes.

Make Light of Evidence.

The Tucker family attaches no importance to the stick pin which the government expects to prove was stolen from the Page home by Tucker.

"Charlie had several pins," said Mrs. Tucker. "All of these were taken by the State police when they searched the house on the day of the arrest. We shall have no difficulty in proving that all of these pins were in Charlie's possession long before Mabel Page was murdered."

"As to connecting Charles with a piece of cloth and a paper bag which were found in the Page house by members of that family," said Walter Tucker, "why, that is equally absurd.

"And so with the piece of cloth, which is described as of the sort used in cleaning rowlocks. Charles hasn't worked in a boathouse since a year ago last April."

When the State police searched the house they found the pin alluded to sticking in the lapel of a coat that was hanging up in Charles Tucker's room.

WOMEN FIGHT OVER ORPHANS

"Mrs. Shea came to my house to get my two grandchildren. When I refused to give them to her, she struck me and knocked me under the stove," said Mrs. Catherine Toomey, of No. 65 Ferrin street, Charlestown, to-day in the District Police Court. Mrs. Annie F. Shea, the defendant, also of Charlestown, was fined $5 for the assault.

"The two little boys, who are only four and seven years old, were given to her by the Children's Aid Society," Mrs. Toomey testified. "I learned that she had kept them in the cellar for three days. Assisted by a girl I got them out of the cellar while Mrs. Shea was away and took them home to live with me."

Mrs. Toomey also told the court that the children's mother was in the Rutland Home for Consumptives, and their father dead.

Mrs. Shea appealed from the fine and the case will go to the Superior Court.

BEGS HE MAY BE LYNCHED

CANIN, Ill., June 8.—With a mob clamoring for his life, John Robinson, of Maunie, implores Sheriff Connery and his deputies to leave him to his fate.

Robinson shot and killed his wife and his brother-in-law and then shot himself, destroying the sight of both eyes. When it was learned that the murderer was not dead the mob formed.

Thirty-six deputies are helping the sheriff to protect his prisoner.

Connery's only explanation of the crime is that "People don't kill one another for nothing."

PROVIDENCE, June 7.—Oystermen of Narragansett Bay complained to-day to the State Shellfish Commission that gas leaking from the refuse banks of the Providence Gas Company was spoiling the shellfish of the bay.

TRAVIS PITTED AGAINST BEST BRITISH GOLFERS

AMERICAN WHO WON AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP STARTS POORLY IN OPEN CONTEST.

SANDWICH, England, June 8.—Walter Travis, the American golf expert, who startled the world by his wonderful playing in the British amateur championship last week, defeating the best golfers of England and Scotland one after another and concluding his triumph by disposing of Blackwell, the runner-up, in the finals, in the same masterly manner in which he had defeated all of the lesser lights, is to-day pitted against the best professionals the old country has ever produced.

"A second Bunker Hill," the British papers said, after reviewing the American's wonderful work in the amateur matches, "but wait until he is pitted against the best English golfers in the open professional tourney."

Travis was in grand form when he drove off from the first tee, and a gallery of the best amateur and professional golfers in Great Britain watched the start. Some followed him over the course, others anxiously awaited news of the progress he was making at the clubhouse by telephone and telegraph.

Travis, after a good start, fell down in his putting. This surprised his friends, as he is acknowledged to be the best exponent of the short stroke game in the world. He covered the first round in eighty-three strokes.

He will have a chance to do better in the concluding play, as the decision in the contest rests upon the lowest total score in four rounds. The contest is not a gruelling, heart-breaking match play, like that of last week.

Travis did not show up to good advantage in returning. His score for the full round was 83, which is poor. He drove further than during the amateur championship contest, but his putting was inferior.

Owing to the heavy entry list, 150 of the best amateurs and professionals in the world, and the blustering weather, only one round was played to-day. Thus far Thompson, a professional, leads, with a score of 75.

Made a Poor Start.

Travis made a poor start, but soon warmed up to his work, the amateur champion took five for each of the first three holes. His fourth hole he completed in three; he sliced his drive for his fifth and finished in four; at the sixth he putted poorly and took four; he bunkered his seventh; completed his eighth in two, and turned in with thirty-nine strokes to his credit.

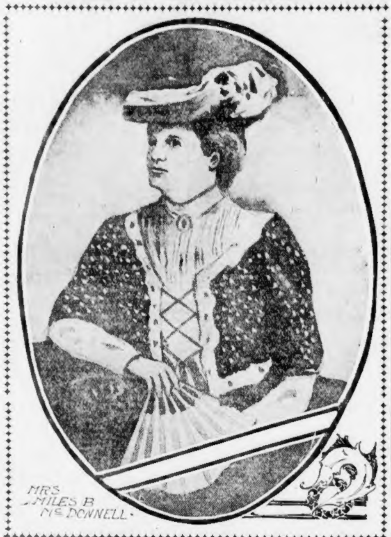
MILES M'DONNELL'S JEST PROVED TO BE A PROPHECY

SENT WIFE BEFORE MURDER DISPATCH SIGNED BY HER SISTER THAT HE WAS DEAD

WIFE OF THE SLAIN MAN.



NOTORIOUS CAREER OF DEAD GAMBLER

Miles B. McDonnell, shot by his friend, Richard E. Preusser, at Albany, was forty-four years old.

In December, 1900, he killed George Price, and wounded four others in the Onawa cafe.

He was acquitted, on the ground of self-defence.

He came to Boston in 1901 and made a fortune in stocks.

He Placed the Muzzle at McDonnell's Heart

Miles McDonnell, figuratively speaking, met death with his boots on. The murderer coolly selected his victim, and with no apparent compunction, sought him out in his hotel, placed the muzzle of his double-barrelled shotgun close to McDonnell's heart and fired.

McDonnell fell dead without a word.

Preusser, all through the affray, was as collected as McDonnell had been a few years ago in the Harlem cafe when he drew his gun and laid low five men before his pistol had stopped barking.

McDonnell left Boston yesterday for Albany. He went for the purpose of taking charge of Fred L. Train, a man who went insane suddenly last Saturday, and who made Albany jewellers open their eyes in astonishment at his wholesale orders of diamonds and other valuables.

WERE DRINKING TOGETHER.

The murder was the outcome of a disagreement between the two men, who had spent the day preceding the shooting in each other's company. They had been drinking together, and Preusser, it is said, was considerably under the influence of liquor when the shooting took place.

Preusser and the murdered man in the evening met a number of friends, and about 11 o'clock they all repaired to Keeler's on State street, where they had lunch.

Preusser and McDonnell did not have any argument that those who sat about the tables know of, but suddenly the two men left and went to the toilet room. It is said that angry words were heard from the room, and after a time McDonnell appeared.

"I'VE GOT THE ODDS NOW."

Preusser entered the dining room a moment later. He left the restaurant hurriedly and went to his office two blocks away, where he procured the double-barrelled shotgun with which he committed the deed.

"I've got odds now. I'm after him," Preusser is said to have remarked as he left the restaurant.

It was not until he had gone that the men there realized the situation, and an effort was made to reach the hotel by telephone to intercept him. The telephone line would not work, and the deed had probably been committed when communication was had with the hotel.

Preusser, who is a one-armed man, entered the lobby and asked Night Clerk A. E. Moir, who was booking guests, if McDonnell was registered there and the number of his room. The gun, it is said, rested against the marble desk out of sight of the clerk. Mr. Moir gave Preusser the number of the room, which was located on the second floor.

"It was about 12:50, as near as I can judge," said Mr. Moir, "when Preusser passed upstairs."

William Russell, night watchman at the Hotel Ten Eyck, sought to prevent McDonnell from opening his door when Preusser knocked. Both Russell and the bellboy, who met Preusser in the hall, asked him where he was going with his shotgun.

"Up here to see a friend," replied Preusser.

When the broker knocked on McDonnell's door the watchman tried to push him away. Preusser levelled the gun and threatened to shoot Russell if he interfered. Russell shouted to McDonnell not to open the door, but the ex-gambler either did not hear, or with characteristic nerve, preferred to face danger than remain in ignorance of it.

McDonnell opened the door of the room. He was clad only in an undershirt and trousers, having removed his shoes and other clothing.

McDonnell had scarcely opened the door when the guests on that floor were startled by the report of a gun. Preusser had fired one shot at McDonnell, it taking effect in the left side in the region of the heart.

McDonnell rolled over on the floor dead.

After he had shot McDonnell, Preusser calmly laid the gun down, resting it on the jamb of the door of McDonnell's room.

As if nothing out of the ordinary had happened, he walked to the second police station, two blocks away and surrendered himself to the officer in charge.

Coroner Van Guysting found when he arrived that the charge had made a wound directly over the heart, and that death must have been instantaneous.

Insists That Preusser Must Have Gone Insane

John J. Quinlan, of No. 43 Dickinson street, Somerville, treasurer of the Metropolitan Stock Exchange, was seen by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN, and said:

"This is the greatest surprise to me, the whole thing. I cannot understand how Preusser could have done that deed except that he must have gone insane. The two men were the best of friends, and there is no reason for Preusser's killing McDonnell.

"McDonnell was one of the best men I ever met. He was quiet always, never seeking any quarrels, and passing much of his time with his family. He was known from the Canadian line to Pennsylvania, and all who have had any business relations with him can attest the truth of this statement.

"He never carried revolvers and bowie knives with him. He never carried any firearms, and the story that he did savors of the boy novels. He was what might be called a family man, having a wife and three children whom he adored.

"He went to Albany to see that Train got good care. He reached there without having had any disagreement with Preusser. How they could have any quarrel is a mystery to me, and I do not believe that they did.

"I think that Preusser must have gone insane. There is no other explanation to suit me. I know that there was no previous quarrel between them.

"I cannot seem to understand it at all."

NO REAL MOTIVES FOR THE KILLING APPARENT

There has as yet appeared no plausible motive for the killing of McDonnell by Preusser.

The two men drank together and quarrelled during the evening. Preusser may have been under the influence of liquor when he did the shooting.

Mrs. McDonnell, wife of the victim, believes that a quarrel over the custody of Train, to place whom in a sanatorium McDonnell went to Albany, led to the shooting.

The theory that Preusser went suddenly insane is advanced by many.

two girls and a boy, from City Island, New York, to Boston, and installed them in their new home in Jamaica Plain.

INSANITY THE THEORY.

The weapon with which McDonnell was killed was a double-barrelled shotgun. He was called to the door of his room in the Ten Eyck by Preusser, despite the warnings of William Russell, a watchman, who shouted to him not to open the door. As McDonnell, dressed only in his night shirt, swung the door back Preusser pressed the muzzle of the gun against the ex-gambler's breast and fired. McDonnell died instantly.

Insanity is the theory advanced by Preusser's friends. They have retained Judge Andrew Hamilton, of New York city, to defend him.

Train Probably Cause of It All, Says His Wife

believe God would let such a thing happen. Our past troubles seemed so far behind us and the future seemed so bright. He was coming back to-day and we were going to buy a pretty house we had selected here in Jamaica Plain.

"I do not know what trouble my husband might have had with Preusser other than what might have arisen over Fred Train." Mrs. McDonnell said, when convinced of the truth of the terrible news. "The men had been close friends for years. My husband was somewhat displeased at Preusser for not attending to Train himself, instead of sending for him, and spoke to me about it before he left. Perhaps he upbraided Preusser for his lack of interest, but even that could not have led to trouble unless Preusser had been drinking.

Telegram Said "Mac Is Dead."

"Train was stricken in Albany on Saturday. Instead of looking after him, Preusser telegraphed to my husband to go to Albany, saying that he did not care to take the responsibility. My husband did not wish to go because of the publicity involved. He hated to do anything that would bring his name into the newspapers because of the old trouble. That was the chief reason why he disliked to go to Albany.

"He told me that he would be back to-day, and he offered to bet me $5 that my sister would be here from New York to-day to visit us. I laughed at him, and when he went out he sent her a telegram to which he signed my name. The telegram said: "Mac is dead. Come to me at once."

Message Was Prophetic.

"Of course he expected that would bring my sister right away, and he would win his wager. My sister telegraphed to me for verification, though, and I wired her that it was a joke. But it was prophetic, and I have telegraphed her again that it is true and to come.

"Mac hated to go away, but he wouldn't see Train left uncared for, and he did not trust Preusser to do it. He left for Albany at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. I sat up reading so that I could awaken him when it was time. He did not take a suit case, as he expected to be back to-day.

Premonition of Evil.

"When he started he seemed to have a premonition of evil. He kissed me and the children good-by and then came back and kissed all over again. I went down to the door with him. Dick Preusser's umbrella, that he had left here on his last visit, was in the corner. I gave it to Mac and told him it was a good one and he could take it back to Dick.

"Preusser has always been a fond friend of my husband's. During my husband's trouble four years ago in New York, Dick was one of his best friends, and he has been ever since. There never has been the least trouble between them of any sort. Whenever Dick came to Boston Mac never let him put up at a hotel; he always came to stay with us. His visits were always very pleasant, and he took a great interest in our children. Often he would bring or send little gifts to them.

"We Have Been Happy."

"I cannot conceive how Dick ever did such an awful thing. He must have been drinking and been heated with passion besides, for he has never shown any such disposition, that I know of. I think that my husband must have upbraided him when he got to Albany for not attending to Train, instead of appealing to him for help, and that from that small beginning this misery has come.

"I don't know what my children will do when they hear of this. For their sake we have been happy that past events have been almost forgotten, although I have no regret for what my husband did. He was not ashamed, and in his trial did what his counsel advised him not to do; he told the truth. I have not minded what people have said, for I have believed in him, but for the sake of the children we have been happy in leaving the trials farther behind, and the future seemed indeed bright."

"Next Friday was little Eddie's fifth birthday, and we had arranged to have a children's party for him. His father was going to give him a pony and a cart for his present. Everything is changed now, I suppose," and the bereaved woman again asked if the reporter was sure her husband was dead.

"Miles was to have been an aide on the Grand Marshal's staff at the Bunker Hill parade on June 17. He was going to ride, and I was going downtown to-day to buy him gloves and other things for the occasion. He was going to wear a Prince Albert coat and a silk hat. He always looked best in that dress.

"Was a Brave Man," Says Wife.

"Now he is dead. I never expected that Miles would meet his death in that cowardly manner. He was a brave man, and if he had been a cruel one he would have killed Tom Kennedy when he had the drop on him in the Harlem cafe. But he saved his life because of the man's wife.

"We went out last Sunday in the country to look at a place he was going to buy for the Summer, but now his mission of charity to Albany has ended so terribly that will have to be abandoned.

"Both he and Preusser were afraid of Train coming back to Massachusetts and being sent to Westboro and getting into the hands of the authorities there, who, they were afraid, wouldn't treat him right.

RESTAURATEUR SAYS PREUSSER IS CRAZY

John Keeler, the proprietor of the Albany restaurant where Preusser and McDonnell spent several hours last evening, to-day made the following statement to the AMERICAN'S correspondent in Albany:

"Both Preusser and McDonnell spent most of the night here. They were seated at one of the tables and were on the most friendly terms. It was not until after 12 o'clock that they moved from the table. They may have had some little misunderstanding, but there was no ill-feeling whatsoever on McDonnell's part. They went down stairs to the lavatory, and they must have had some dispute down there, for Preusser kicked McDonnell. McDonnell, who came out first, stopped and spoke to me.

"'He's crazy,' commented McDonnell on Preusser. 'Why, he's as bad off as Train.'

"After the shooting I saw Preusser in police headquarters, and he seemed like one dazed. He certainly was not in his right mind when he shot McDonnell."

PREUSSER KNOWN AMONG BROKERS

ALBANY, June 8.—Richard E. Preusser came to Albany about fifteen years ago from New York city and lived with his wife and step-daughter at No. 92 North Pearl street. When in New York he was a member of the Consolidated Stock Exchange and was well known among brokers. Early in life he met with a railroad accident in which he lost his arm. He grew up in the brokerage business.

Coming to Albany, he established a brokerage firm and made considerable money. Some years ago he formed the firm of Richard E. Preusser & Co., with John L. Mallett as partner, and the firm transacted a grain, stock and brokerage business at No. 423 Broadway, and was a correspondent of the Metropolitan Stock Exchange of Boston, of which McDonnell was the principal owner.

MADE MERRY IN HOTEL PARTY MONDAY NIGHT

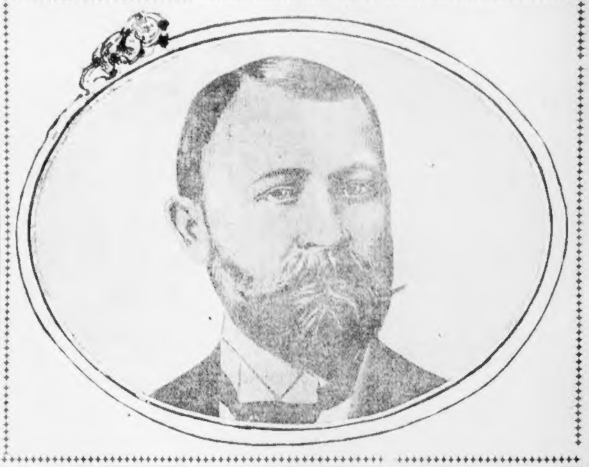
McDonnell was well known at the Essex Hotel, and particularly around the bar, the cigar stand and the newsstand. Always well dressed, possessing plenty of money and generous in disposition, he made friends readily, and being a remarkably good talker and story teller was always the life of any party of which he became a member.

The last time he was seen at the hotel was on Monday evening. He was in the best of spirits. Among those in his little party in the cafe was Colonel J. C. Webb, the proprietor of the Terminal Station cigar stand. He carried with him a blackthorn stick.

"How is it, McDonnell," asked Colonel Webb, "that you always carry that stick?"

"That is my lucky stick," was McDonnell's reply.

MILES B. McDONNELL SLAIN BY HIS FRIEND.



SHOT FIVE MEN IN ONAWA CAFE FIGHT

Many will readily recall the terrible pistol battle in December, 1900, in the Onawa cafe, Harlem, in which Miles B. McDonnell, himself now dead from an assassin's bullet, shot five men, one of them George Price, dying instantly. McDonnell was known as one of the most desperate gamblers of the country.

There were six of them in the saloon when it began. Tom Kennedy, ex-convict, gambler and Tammany Hall captain, had four of his own ilk as companions, peacefully drinking, when McDonnell entered. It is alleged that he promptly picked a quarrel with Kennedy and his supporters. Pistols were drawn and the battle began. Thirty seconds after the shooting began, they claim, Miles McDonnell and the dying man, George Price, were left alone in the barroom. Kennedy and his companions, excepting Price, had escaped into the street. Three of them, including Kennedy, in two places.

It was said in the West that McDonnell had killed two men. He was known as a gun fighter all the way to 'Frisco.

McDonnell's trial was as sensational as the shooting. Every effort was made by Kennedy and his followers to secure his conviction, but acquittal on the ground of self-defence was the verdict.

Having spent six months in jail, McDonnell, when free, resolved to reform. He aided Colonel Partridge in cleaning out some of the Harlem gambling dives. Then, in 1901, he came to Boston, entering upon his career as a successful broker in stocks.

WISE GIRLS EDUCATE THEMSELVES at Expense of Their POSTERITY Says Dr. Smith.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 8.—Dr. A. L. Smith, of Montreal, in a paper read before the American Medical Association, now in progress here, denounces the higher education for girls.

"Higher education for women is unwise and unjustifiable, because it makes the duties and privileges of motherhood distasteful," is one of his passages.

"If children come to these highly educated women, they are usually few in number and physically or mentally deficient. The phosphates that should be in their little bodies have been stolen to fit out the brains of their mothers," said Dr. Smith.

"I would give girls frequent vacations and would advise early marriages. If the starvation and mortification of the flesh for the exaltation of the spirit shall continue, the righteous sentence of death will be inexorably executed."

QUINCY BOY IS LOST IN N. Y.

A runaway lad giving the name of William Mally, of Quincy, is held by the New York Police till they can hear from his parents.

Despatches from New York to the BOSTON AMERICAN say that among the prisoners before Magistrate Ommen in the Centre street, New York, Police Court was a small boy, who gave his name as William Mally, seventeen years old, of Quincy, Mass. The boy did not look to be over fourteen years old. He was found by the police in a drunken condition at New Bowery and Roosevelt street early this morning. He said that he was on his way to visit his uncle, who is on the Bowery, he said, and got two glasses of beer, which made him drunk.

He was removed to the City Hospital. He sustained many bruises and a scalp wound.

'$500? NO! NO BRIDE OF MINE,' SHE SUES HIM

Boston Grocer Defendant in Worcester Girl's $8,000 Breach of Promise Suit.

WOULD WED FOR DOWRY

Because she believes he does not intend to marry her, Miss Gussie Resnick, of Worcester, is suing Louis N. Price, a Boston business man, for $8,000 for breach of promise.

While admitting that he agreed to marry the plaintiff, Mr. Price claims his agreement was conditional upon the payment of a dowry of $500 by the prospective bride's father, which payment he says has not been in accordance with the understanding.

Mr. Price, whose father and brother make up the firm of A. Price & Son, grocers, at 81 Green street, stated his side of the case to an AMERICAN reporter this morning as follows:

"I met Miss Resnick in Worcester, where she resides, about ten months ago, while on a business trip there. Her uncle, with whom I was acquainted, introduced us. She is a pretty girl, about twenty-four years old, and I liked her from the first. During the next few months I made several visits to her home.

$500 If He Married.

"One day her father came to Boston to see me, and we talked over the question of a marriage. It was arranged between us that Miss Resnick and I would be married some time in June or July of the present year, and that four months before the wedding Mr. Resnick should pay over to me a dowry of $500.

"When the proper time arrived I wrote him, reminding him of his part of the agreement. He replied that he had reconsidered the matter, and had decided that he would pay the dowry two weeks before the wedding.

"I considered this a breach of our contract, and have since done nothing further regarding the matter."

"Would you contract a marriage provided the dowry was paid you now?" Mr. Price was asked.

"As to that I have nothing to say. I consider that Miss Resnick's folks have violated whatever agreement existed between us."

Says He Can Prove It.

Mr. Price claims to be able to prove that such an arrangement existed. The engagement was broken off about three months ago, he says.

The girl is the daughter of Simon Resnick, a Worcester butcher, who lives at 55 Water street in that city. The suit is brought by Lawyer Simon G. Friedman through the Superior Court, and papers have already been served on Mr. Price. The latter has retained Lourie and Ginsberg, of Boston, as attorneys.

Mr. Price has been in the grocery business in the West End about three years, and ran a store at 17 Lyman street up to a short time ago. He boards at 32 Spring street.

Miss Whalley was formerly married to Sherrie Matthews, the comedian, and her first marriage was most romantic. Meeting the actor while she was playing in "The Man in the Moon" Company, in New York, she nursed him through a long illness in Boston, but after a short matrimonial experience the couple separated, and last month a decree of divorce was granted.

KNOW BUYER OF GUN THAT SHOT YOUNG

Detectives Make Important Find in Case of Death of Rich Bookmaker.

MAY FREE NAN PATTERSON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The police are now convinced that "Caesar" Young was not shot and killed by his own revolver while riding with Nan Patterson, the "Florodora" sextette girl, in a hansom cab.

Detective Armstrong has traced the weapon and knows who owned it. It was sold in November, 1898, across the counter of Schoverling, Daly & Gales at No. 302 Broadway. At that time Young was in San Francisco.

J. Morgan Smith, husband of Nan Patterson's sister, was in New York in November in 1898. Detective Armstrong questioned Mr. Smith about the revolver, but he declined to answer. He has been subpoenaed to appear before the Grand Jury to-day, when he will be questioned further. It is expected that the ownership of the revolver will be established before the Grand Jury to-day.

If Justice Clark, of the Supreme Court, decides quickly and favorably on the habeas corpus to-day, Nan Patterson, who is a prisoner in the Tombs, will go free. If, on the other hand, Justice Clark takes time in rendering a decision, the Grand Jury, which convenes at the same hour as does the court, is expected to indict her. It will be a race between the District Attorney and Henry Unger, counsel for Nan Patterson.

William H. Rothwell, better known as "Young Corbett," former world's featherweight champion pugilist, has promised to advance the funds required for Nan Patterson's defence, and if she is to be released on bail, he will provide a bond.

He and she were good friends in San Francisco, and it was once reported that they were to be married.

SKIPPER SMITH SEES 100-FOOT SEA SERPENT

NEW BEDFORD CREW TELL TRUE TALE OF MONSTER OUTSIDE BUZZARD'S BAY.

The sea serpent has arrived off shore for the Summer season.

He was sighted at the mouth of Buzzard's Bay by Cap'n Jonathan Smith, of the saucy schooner Daisy, of New Bedford. Cap'n Smith saw him plainly. Cap'n Smith is known as a temperance skipper and a truthful one.

The serpent was looking finely. He seems as fat and sassy as ever. Winter has not thinned him. High coal has not worried him. The trust has not been formed yet which can vex him. The presidential craze has not turned a hair gray.

Talk Only of Sea Monster.

Dispatches from New Bedford to the BOSTON AMERICAN say that Cap'n Jonathan Smith came in with the Daisy this morning, and that skipper and crew can talk of nothing but the genuine sea serpent they saw.

"T'were just daybreak yesterday," says Cap'n Smith, "when the sea serpent was sighted. We had been mackereling all night. I was below takin' a rest.

"One of the crew sighted the serpent fust. He was scared and yells to me. I tumbles up on deck.

"There, 'bout a quarter league off'n the port bow was the sea serpent. Fully a hundred feet of him was stretched along the top of the water, plain as could be.

Serpent Lazy and Noisy.

"He was layin' there, lazy like, risin' and fallin' with the swell. He made no move toward us, jus' kept still an' blowin' off steam like a whale, and makin' a noise like an exhaust that I could hear plain.

"I got my glass an' seen that the serpent was as big round as the butt o' my foremast. He was jus' like a snake, only bigger. He was shiny, like he'd been oiled. His head was long and flat-like, with two good-sized eyes. I watched him five minutes through the glass. Then he dove, an' didn't come up ag'in. I never seen nothin' like it, an' it's forty years I've been sailin' the seas."

Members of the crew confirmed Cap'n Smith's story, and the appearance of the annual visitor is accepted without question.

CHURCHILL IS SUED FOR $25,000.

DIES AT 85; HAD PEARD MONEY?

John Peard, of No. 98 Bolton street, South Boston, was found dead in bed in his home this morning. He was eighty-five. Neighbors and friends are wondering if he left any property. Although for months past he has been aided by persons who knew him when he was regarded as a prosperous man, a stranger told one of former Councillor Jeremiah J. McNamara's bartenders that the saloon keeper and politician had been named as an executor in Peard's will.

"I don't believe there is anything in the story that Peard left any property," said Mr. McNamara. "He was one of the squarest men that ever lived. He was a wonder for his age. Until recently he was as spry as a boy.

"He has lived in South Boston for forty or fifty years. He was born in England, and was a stonecutter when he came here. Afterward he did some carpentering. He was a great cock fighter, and pulled off some of the biggest mains ever known around Boston."

SENATE PASSES BATES'S SUNDAY BILL

Governor Bates.

The vote in favor of the substitute measure was 19 to 8. Senator Dana moved a suspension of the rules that the bill might be immediately passed to its third reading; Senator Callender objected.

The substitute was adopted by a rising vote, ordered by President Jones. Senator Callender's motion that the measure be laid over for reference to the next General Court was voted down.

Reaches Senate Late.

The substitute did not reach the Senate until just before noon, as the drafting of it occupied considerable time, and the Senate, which had no other business before it, was obliged to wait for it.

The terms of the bill of the minority are in accordance with the known wishes of Governor Bates, although they were not expressed in the message which he sent to the Legislature last week.

The substitute provides against public entertainments excepting those given in good faith for the benefit of a religious or charitable society, the entire proceeds of which shall be used by them, excepting a sum not exceeding twenty-five per cent. of the gross proceeds for reasonable expenses, providing that such entertainments are held in the usual place of worship of the society.

Senator Dana Explains.

Senator Dana, in advocating the substitution of his bill, said: "At the present time it is not clear whether a vaudeville performance for the benefit of the performers could not be given, and it is certain, from the opinion of the Supreme Court, that the law is not in the condition in which its framers intended it to be.

"I understand that the Chief of the State Police believes that unless the law is amended there is an opportunity of what is popularly termed a 'wide open Sunday.'

"Under the bill submitted it is an offence for a religious or charitable society to give a secular performance on the Lord's Day, unless at least 75 per cent. of the proceeds are devoted to a charitable or religious purpose.

"This amendment will shut out the possibility of 'fake' shows, and will go further. It will give the religious societies the privilege which I believe none would deny them of giving commendable entertainments for commendable purposes.

To Permit Good Music.

"The law was made to read as it does now, I understand, to permit the Handel and Haydn societies to give their concerts, and I believe the amendment will permit them to continue to do so.

"The amendment is in accord with the desire of the executive, and is intended to safeguard the Sunday that is desired in a Christian community."

Senator Callender said: "Is it not the object of the Sunday law to prevent vaudeville shows and other performances which the average man doesn't wish to take place on Sunday, and not to prescribe how much shall go to one purpose or another and how much to a showman? The movers of this amendment bring in this traffic on this sacred subject like the money lenders in the temple."

All Proceeds to Charity.

Questioned by Senator Bemis if he would agree to an amendment giving the gross proceeds to charity, Senator Callender said that would be impracticable. He said further: "It is not right to come in at the end of the session, and without time to consider it fully, and place on the statute books a law to stand for centuries."

Directing his attention to Senator Dana, Senator Callender asked: "Does the chairman of the Judiciary Committee know that on Sunday after Sunday paid lecturers from all over the country appeared at public entertainments in Boston and in other cities in the Commonwealth and conducted that splendid agitation which resulted in the birth of the party to which he belongs and in the freedom of the slave?"

Senator Dana replied that he did not consider those meetings of the nature requiring a license.

COURT'S DELAY HOLDS LETTERS

More than 500 letters from various parts of New England addressed to the Preferred Mercantile Company, Winthrop Building, this city, against which a "fraud circular" was issued March 27, are held up at the Central Post Office. New letters are being received daily.

The fraud order included directions to the postmaster to return all the letters to the senders. Inspector Snow said the company was carrying on a lottery by selling "diamond leases" on the installment plan. A lucky investor could get a diamond or its equivalent in cash before the expiration of the lease.

Before the postmaster could execute the order a temporary injunction was secured by the company. Judge Colt thereupon directed the postmaster to hold the letters, but not to return them.

As no day has yet been set for a hearing, the mail is rapidly accumulating, and complaints are received daily from persons who have money at stake.

300 BOOKED TO LOSE JOBS.

The wholesale dismissal of city employes is looked for to-day. To-morrow the new civil service law goes into effect, protecting them from transfer or dismissal without a hearing which shall be of public record. It is expected that 200 or more men will be dropped from the Street Department pay roll before nightfall.

WEDDING OF ALDRICH'S SON

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 8.—A fashionable wedding will be that of Miss Martha Louisa Blackwell and Mr. Stuart Morgan Aldrich this evening at the First Presbyterian Church. Many invitations have been sent out.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Blackwell, of this city, and the bridegroom is the son of United States Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island. One of the ushers will be John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The couple will spend the Summer at Warwick, R. I., Senator Aldrich's Summer home.

ORDERED TO PAY OVER $4,992,000 IN BONDS

Judge Lathrop, in the Supreme Court to-day, handed down an order to the New England Trust Company to pay over to the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad $4,992,000 of 4 per cent. bonds held by the trust company as trustees under a mortgage deed of the Illinois branch of the road.

These bonds had been held by Arthur Wainwright, of Boston, and were originally 3½ per cents.

HUSBAND WITH $1,000 MISSING

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, June 8.—Mrs. John E. Ward, of No. 23 Brownville street, asked the police to-day to make search for her husband, a jewelry salesman, who has been missing from his home since Monday. She believes he has been a victim of foul play.

When he left the house on Monday, Mrs. Ward says, her husband caried a satchel containing about $1,000 worth of jewelry. She fears that he has been robbed and murdered.

Promised to Be Home.

"I feel sure that something has happened to my husband," said Mrs. Ward. "He never drank, and he was always home every night. He told me when he left the house on Monday morning that he would be sure to be home that night. I know that he would not disappoint me unless something had befallen him because I have been ill. He was better known as Eddie Ward than John E. Ward."

Ward is forty-seven years old, about five feet eight inches tall, and has gray hair and a small moustache. He wore dark clothes and a light overcoat.

ICE TRUST HAS FOE IN FIELD

By the time the weather warms up Boston is likely to be in the midst of an ice war, and the Ice Trust, represented in this city by the Boston Ice Company, owned by the American Ice Company, will have to fight.

The Morrill-Atwood Ice Company is the opponent. This is a close corporation, capitalized for $100,000 with plant at Wakefield.

The Boston Ice Company has already cut prices to certain customers from $3 to $2.50 per ton.

A general reduction to $2.50 a ton, wholesale, is expected, and cut-priced cakes of ice will probably be a feature of the house-to-house trade.

Prices in New York have been cut to $1.50 per ton.

Attack On Russian Cruiser.

THE ENEMY TAKES THEM BY SURPRISE.

THE wily Japanese have shown considerable skill in enticing the Russians out from their secure harbors and then suddenly falling upon them in overpowering numbers. It is then "survive or perish"—"sink or swim" for the Russian cruiser, and the chances are against her getting back to her safe harbor again, at least without a weakened body. Strange as it may seem, this is an analogous case to what happens very often to the human body in the spring or fall of the year. We are very often enjoying the first signs of spring weather—watching nature take on new life—when unexpectedly we are surprised by the attack of fever, grippe, or cold. No one knows just why it is, but it is nevertheless true, that our bodies are in a weakened condition at this time of year, and the germs of disease are not thrown off by our blood as they are in ordinary times; therefore, they have a chance to thrive and grow. It is also probable that during the winter, when we have had little chance for sunlight, healthful exercise in outdoor air and few green vegetables for diet, that poisons have accumulated in the system—our blood in disorder—leaves our body weak to resist the attack of these little "beasts"—the microbes of disease.

Pluck and stamina are largely a question of good health. It only takes one knock-down blow to finish a man with a headache. It only takes a small set-back to disconcert a nervous and shaky man. A bilious, headachy man goes into bankruptcy at the first embarrassment. A nervous man who does not sleep at night and gets up shaky in the morning gives up the battle of business at the first discouragement. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best of all health-makers and health-keepers. It makes pure, rich blood. It forces out all impurities and disease germs. It does not make any difference what the disease may be called, so long as it has its inception in improper or insufficient nourishment—this great medicine will cure it. It may be called dyspepsia, kidney disease, "liver complaint," skin or blood disease, or nervous prostration—all these have the same starting point. The "Golden Medical Discovery" reaches that point. It will cure these diseases absolutely. None of them can retain their hold on the system when the arteries are filled with rich, pure blood.

The man who suffers from bronchitis, weak lungs, spitting of blood or any disease of the air-passages which, if neglected leads up to consumption, may take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with almost absolute assurance of recovery. It soothes and heals the delicate and sensitive tissues of the air-passages and lungs, checks the cough, facilitates expectoration, drives out all impurities and disease germs from the tainted blood and builds new and healthy tissues.

All serious sickness is attended with wasting of the body, and this with lack of appetite and assimilative power.

Consumption, for example, is a wasting disease. Its course is marked by emaciation. The common treatment of consumption is by food fats.

But this treatment fails to recognize the fact that all food must be digested; that you can't digest and assimilate any kind of food if the stomach is broken down and these oils being foods cannot be digested and assimilated by the weak stomach. The oils are fed in an attempt to bring the character of the food down to the level of a weak stomach. Dr. Pierce's theory is that you must bring the weak stomach up to the level of strong food. That is the only way in which the stomach can furnish the blood supply for the body, adequate in its quantity and in its vital elements to the needs of the whole body and all its parts.

This is the work perfectly performed by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It acts upon the weak stomach so that it regains strength.

"After doctoring for eight months for inflammation of the lungs, and after I had been virtually given up and believed there was no hope of recovery, I heard of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Sarah Garfield of No. 1129 South Linden Street, Indianapolis, Indiana, Treasurer Indianapolis Floral Society. "I used it and found it simply a wonderful remedy. The soreness was gradually relieved, my general health was greatly improved, and I felt I was on the fair road to recovery. My appetite increased and I began to take on flesh and stop coughing so hard, enabling me to get a good night's rest—a luxury I had not known for months. Within four months I was completely restored, strong, well, and happy to think I had my health once more. I appreciated it as I never had done before, and give all the credit to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

"A year ago I was troubled with dyspepsia; thought at the time that I had heart trouble and was expecting to die at almost any minute," writes Mrs. Lois Hooper, of Red Bluff, Mont. "I made up my mind I would write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, which I did, and received a prompt reply advising me to take his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took six bottles, and can truthfully say that I have neither heart trouble nor dyspepsia now. I would advise all who are suffering from either trouble to write to Dr. Pierce at once."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the best for the bowels. Use them with the "Discovery."

We guarantee that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does not contain alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. It is a pure compound of medicinal plants scientifically combined. Persons making false statements concerning its ingredients will be prosecuted.

R. V. Pierce

THOUSANDS AT CONVERSE BIER

State Funeral for Malden's Most Public-Spirited Citizen.

BURIAL IS AT WOODLAWN

Malden mourned to-day for Elisha S. Converse, its most public-spirited citizen. Thousands of men, women and children reverently passed the bier in the First Baptist Church. The edifice was decorated with lilies and other flowers, from the estate of the deceased. Flags at half mast and closed stores, banks, schools and public buildings were silent evidences of public grief.

Among the throng which slowly filed through the church from 11 to 1 o'clock were many of the 12,000 employes of the great rubber shoe factories founded by Mr. Converse. All employes of this army of working people were given a day's leisure at full pay.

Prayer at the Home.

During the morning the Rev. C. H. Moss, pastor of the church, held a service of prayer at the late home of the dead philanthropist on Main street. Shortly before eleven o'clock the body was taken to the church under the escort of the past and present members of the city government. Others attending the church services are members of Masonic lodges, Malden and Boston bank officials and many prominent professional men. It is the most memorable funeral that Malden has ever seen, though simple in service and thoroughly unostentatious. The Rev. C. H. Moss officiates at the church, assisted by the Rev. Henry O. Hiscock, of Albany, N. Y., and the Rev. J. F. Albion, of Portland, Me.

The Pallbearers.

The pallbearers are F. B. Bemis and F. H. Darling, of Boston, H. P. Ballard, E. F. Smith and F. T. Ryder, of Malden, H. E. Sawyer, of New York, J. E. Cochrane, of Dedham, and W. T. A. Norris, of Melrose.

Many Malden men sent flowers to be heaped upon the casket, and others wear the black badge of mourning upon their arms.

The interment will be in Woodlawn Cemetery, where Mrs. Converse is buried.

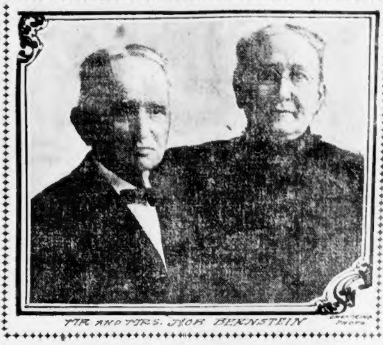
CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING SATURDAY

MR. AND MRS. JACOB L. BORNSTEIN, OF DORCHESTER, HAPPY WITH MANY CHILDREN.



MR AND MRS. JACOB BERNSTEIN
[illegible] PHOTO

COUPLE MARRIED FIFTY YEARS.

At their home, 25 Hillsorn street, Dorchester, Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob L. Bornstein will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. Although both the groom and the bride were born in Germany it was not until after they had been in this country for some time that they met. It was at a reception tendered to a friend in New York that they first saw each other, and it was a case of love at first sight. They came to Boston to be married.

After the wedding Mr. Bornstein opened a clothing store on Washington street, and until a few years ago, when he sold out, has always been a prominent figure in Boston's business fraternity. He is seventy-one years old and enjoys perfect health.

Mrs. Bornstein is the daughter of J. Mode, and as Minnie Mode she was a belle in society circles of her birthplace where she remained until eighteen years of age. She is a prominent worker in the interests of Union Park Street Temple, of which her husband was one of the founders.

Living with them at their residence Mr. and Mrs. Bornstein enjoy the companionship of their children and grandchildren. Of five children there survive Mayer Bornstein, Mrs. Harry Cohen and Mrs. Louis Leyser. The grandchildren include Louis Leyser, Jr., Miss Florence Leyser, Irving Leyser and Harold Bornstein.

STEAL SLOW HORSE, PUT IT BACK, TAKE ANOTHER

TWO PARTICULAR THIEVES BIND ONE BROCKTON WATCHMAN, HOLD UP SECOND.

Special to the Boston American.

BROCKTON, June 8.—Finding the horse they had stolen was too slow, two men returned the rig to the stable they had broken into less than an hour before, released the hostler whom they had bound and gagged, and from a second stable took a horse and rig, while they held the watchman off at the point of a revolver.

The men entered the stable of the People's Ice Company at 1 o'clock this morning. One of them covered the hostler, Will Whitten, with his shooter, while the other hitched up a bay horse. Trussing up the hostler so he could make no move or outcry, they drove off.

Forty-five minutes later the hostler was amazed by seeing the men return, leave the stolen rig, loosen the bonds which held him, and disappear into the night.

A little later the watchman at E. C. Cahoon's stable was awakened by a noise, and on starting to investigate found himself looking into the muzzle of a revolver. The same programme was carried out here by the robbers, who, after leaving the watchman securely pinioned, drove off in the direction of Taunton.

Both men are described as young, about five feet six inches tall, dressed in light clothes and light soft hats, and both wearing moustaches. The police have no clue to their identity.

SAW RYAN IN THE LAUNDRY

Special to the Boston American.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., June 8.—Damaging testimony was given to-day against Cyrus L. Ryan, who is on trial here for the murder of Sam Hoo Yoke, a Chinese laundryman, who was found drowned in a washtub in his shop about 1 o'clock on January 28.

Several witnesses swore they had seen Ryan in the laundry shortly before 1 o'clock, and others declared they had seen him hurrying away from it with a flushed face and an excited manner just before the murder was discovered.

Seen by Two Witnesses.

Margaret J. Barry, of South Hanover, thirteen years old, testified that she was on her way to school at 12:45 when she saw Ryan.

"He was near the woods at the junction of Elm street and Broadway," she said, "and was running toward Curtis's Crossing from the direction of Hanover Four Corners, where the laundry is located."

Miss Sarah F. Christie was the next witness. She was on her way to board the 2:15 train, when she saw Ryan.

"He was coming from the Corners," she said, "and was running. His face was flushed. I heard of the murder at the depot. I spoke to Ryan about it. He was very nervous. He said he was sorry to hear the Chinaman was dead."

Miss Catherine Ridgeway said she saw Ryan hurrying from the Corners at 12:50, and that his face was flushed. She said she saw him take something from his pocket that looked like a watch.

William F. Bates testified that he saw Ryan get on the train with his sweetheart and sister-in-law. "He appeared very nervous," he said.

Hurry to Get Shaved.

Domingo S. Perry, a barber of Hanover, said he saw Ryan the day of the murder. "Ryan came into my shop," said the witness, "and said he was in a hurry to get shaved, as he was going away."

Frank E. Chamberlain, a hostler at Hanover, said: "I saw Ryan about 12:50 on the day of the murder. He came to the stable. He said he wanted a team in a hurry to go to Rockland."

John C. Levings, fifteen years old, said that as he was leaving his home for school at 12:30 on the day of the murder he saw Ryan coming from the direction of the laundry.

PITTSFIELD HAS FOURTH OF JULY SAFEGUARDS

PITTSFIELD, June 8.—This city has restricted the sale of Fourth of July explosives to July 1, 2 and 4, the size of giant crackers to six inches, and has prohibited the sale of pistols and cartridges to minors under fifteen years.

WILL DISCUSS FIREMEN'S KICK

An attempt will be made to-day to harmonize the differences that have arisen between Judge Emmons and the veteran firemen over their Sunday music at a special meeting of the Police Board.

The Judge says the firemen may have their music at the Forest Hills Cemetery and on their way home, but that they can not parade to the cemetery with bands playing. This is far from satisfactory to the firemen.

Captain W. P. Cherrington, secretary of the Veteran Firemen's Association, said to-day that the "Judge's love for notoriety has run away with his judicial ability."

"Since the law was passed in 1896," he says, "we have paraded every year, and we should have done the same this year without asking permission, and let the responsibility of stopping the parade rest upon the parties who would dare to stop it."

The Judge says: "The veteran firemen are not members of the State militia, which is the only body that is allowed to parade with bands on Sunday. There is no reason why they should be allowed to parade with music any more than the Salvation Army or the Italian socities."

LABOR

By Frank K. Foster.

BISHOP LAWRENCE, in his address to the "Tech" seniors, Sunday, took as his topic the relationship of the workers to their labor. He frankly recognized the dreary and mechanical nature of much of manual labor and laid stress upon maintaining "a sense of proportion between work and the amenities of life."

The bishop, however, placed a share of the responsibility for existing conditions upon employers, and told his hearers that "Upon you, as representatives of intelligent citizenship and educated science rests in a large degree the answer to the question as to whether the life of the laborer is to be joyless and hopeless, or whether it is to be tempered with a sense of opportunity, if not kindled with the joy of production."

His recommendation for the amelioration of hard industrial conditions is the developing of the ethics of christianity between employers and employes.

It is probably true that if business should become "ethicalized," so to speak, there would be little or no need for either trade unions or Parry associations. But the hard fact remains that we are living in a world where Sunday and week-day ethics are often times but remotely connected.

Typographical Union No. 6, of New York City, cast 5,225 votes at its recent election. This local union has over 6,000 membership, and is numerically the strongest local union in America.

As a result of the industrial chaos existing in Colorado the wage-earners there are organizing liberty leagues, which have for their purpose the unifying of the labor vote and a general strike at the ballot box.

The national eight-hour bill, which failed of a report by the Labor Committee, is now in the hands of the Department of Commerce and Labor, which has been instructed to report to the next Congress upon the following points:

First—What would be the additional cost to the United States under the bill on articles which it customarily obtains by contract?

Second—What damage would it inflict upon the manufacturing interests?

Third—Would contractors who now supply the government continue to contract with the government?

Fourth—What effect would it have upon the ship building interests?

Fifth—What effect would it have on any export trade?

Sixth—Are working people willing to have the right taken from them of working more than eight hours?

Seventh—What effect would it have on the agricultural interests?

The report that Terence V. Powderly may again assume command of the Knights of Labor, in order to build up that organization, recalls to mind the fact that it was under Powderly's administration that the order began its decline. The former general master workman has, however, become much more liberal and broad-minded of late years, and undoubtedly possesses great abilities as an influencer of men.

The barbers' license bill went the way of all other labor bills in the Senate. It was a "close shave" though.

A feature of the exhibit in Social Economy Hall at the St. Louis Fair is a series of colored charts placed there by the Cigarmakers' International Union, showing the financial development of that organization and the proportionate amounts devoted to the various purposes of the union. The chart for 1903 shows that the union paid out during that period for sick benefits $147,054, for death benefits $138,975, for travelling benefits $52,521, for strike benefits $20,858. These figures should cause reflection in the minds of people who are accustomed to regard the trade union as mainly a strike organization.

The Boston Central Labor Union has taken up the cause of the Free Home for Consumptives in Dorchester, and is assisting in the raising of funds for this most worthy charity. Another instance of the "selfish and nefarious" nature of the trade union movement.

An organization which talks of a general strike, with a raw and undisciplined membership and an empty treasury, needs to be re-introduced to the elementals of trade organization.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKES are to be declared on three buildings in Boston to-day. The strike declared on the Kimball building, now being erected on the site of the old Boston Museum, is still on. The charge made by the painters that the hardwood finishers were doing work generally performed by painters, and which was left unfinished when the painters' strike was declared, is to be thoroughly investigated by the Building Trades Council. Strike-breaking by an affiliated union is to be the charge.

Ten more firms have signed the new agreement granting the increase in wages, and fifty men returned to work this morning.

At the meeting of the union held last night 159 new members were admitted.

SHOE WORKERS QUARREL.

At the Charles H. Moulton shoe factory, in Brookfield, the controversy between the lasters and fitters in regard to which of the trades shall do the bottom work is still in dispute, and the breach threatens to divide the local union of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

Formerly the fitters did part of the work that is now done by the lasters, that is work on the bottom stock. To throw this back to the fitters is the aim of the lasters, and if it is not taken from them the lasters have announced their intention of striking.

LABOR PARADE IN GARDNER.

A labor demonstration was held in Gardiner, Me., last night. A parade of union men, headed by a squad of police, was held, and the city was ablaze with red fire for an hour previous to the opening of the meeting.

MORE TROUBLE AT SCHOOL.

The Dearborn street school promises to be the scene of more labor troubles before it is completed. The building laborers are the latest to declare a strike, after endeavoring for several weeks to adjust several grievances. It is expected that several more unions may decide to go out and tie up the work completely.

NEW ENGINEERS' UNION.

Boston has a new union to be known as Boston Local No. 2[illegible]3 of the International Union of Steam Engineers. The headquarters will be at No. 885 Washington street. More than seventy-six signed the charter list, and the union will have 200 members.

Speeches were made by former International President Frank Monaghan, of the Engineers' Union, who instituted the new local; William R. P. Whelan, state president of the Engineers' Union; President William Fitzgerald and Vice-President [illegible], of Engineers' Union 16; and President Wesley A. Goodwin, of the Coal Hoisting Engineers.

The delegates to the State convention of Engineers' Union next Sunday, to the joint local board, and to the Boston Central Labor Union were elected.

ELEVATOR MEN STRIKE.

All men engaged in the construction of elevators were this morning notified to go on strike, as an international strike against the Elevator Trust has been ordered. This action was determined upon at the meeting of the National Executive Board at Chicago, because of a strike in Philadelphia which has been on for several weeks.

McHALE CASE UNSETTLED.

F. N. Noschang, president of the International Union of Barbers, is in Boston to-day. In addressing the members of the local union, Mr. Noschang said: "The board has failed to render a decision in the case of Martin McHale, president of the Boston Union, who has been deposed from office on the ground that he was an employer."

Mr. McHale appealed to the international president, who sustained the appeal. The local union decided not to recognize the decision of the international president, and appealed to the international executive board.

BUTCHERS' SMOKE TALK.

Frank K. Foster and President Frank H. McCarthy, of Boston Central Labor Union, were prominent speakers at the smoke talk and entertainment of Boston Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's Union. The attendance was 300. Secretary [illegible], of Typographical Union 13, New England Organizer John H. Shea, of Springfield, and President D. Wedderman, of Cambridge Sausagemakers' Union, followed on the programme. The entertainment list included Jim and Tom Flanigan, Eddie Grecler, A. J. Keefe, Frank Cavanaugh, Frank Gibson, Frank Rouse, George Lally, Ned Flanagan and James Murphy.

FOR EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

At a special meeting for the members of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union who are employed in nine-hour shops, to be held at No. 46 Stillman street to-night, the decisions of Hicks & Son and Badger & Co. in regard to granting the eight-hour day asked for by the Union will be announced. The agreement committee, which has been soliciting the employers to grant the eight-hour day, report that they have secured the signatures of more than half of the employers. It is especially desired to have the shops of Hicks & Son and Badger & Co. grant the shorter workday, as these shops are the largest in the city.

NORWOOD OFFICERS ELECTED.

The Business Association of Norwood has elected the following as officers: President, James A. Halloran; vice-president, Clifford B. Sanborn; secretary, William T. Whedon; treasurer, Edgar L. Bigelow; executive committee, Francis E. Everett, James M. Folan, Milton H. Howard, Dr. F. S. Bastow, Charles F. Wheelock.

FOUNDRY IS CLOSED.

Forced into a corner by the strike of the 1,800 men in its employ, the Dominion Iron & Steel Company has closed down altogether in Sydney, C. B. The clerical force was notified not to report for work to-day.

200 MEN LAID OFF.

In Newport, R. I., 200 employes of the repair shops of the New York, New Haven & Hartford road here have been laid off. Most of them have been given an opportunity to work with the Fore River shipyard at Quincy, where a boat is under construction for the railroad.

LABOR NOTES.

The Boston Janitors' Mutual Benefit Association held a strawberry festival and entertainment in Legion of Honor Hall, Huntington avenue, last evening.

Fifteen members of the Detroit Harbor of the Masters and Pilots' Association have resigned from the association in the office of Captain J. W. Westcott, local agent for the steel corporation fleet.

The Mine Conciliation Board is meeting at Lansford, Pa., to-day to endeavor to bring about a compromise between the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company and its employes regarding alleged discrimination on the part of the company against union men. The board will probably be in session for three days.

Because the stools on which they had been accustomed to sit at their work in the Washington silk mill, at Washington, N. J., were removed, forty girls walked out of the factory. They declare they will not work standing up. A few weeks ago the manager reduced the girls' pay one per cent. and there was a vigorous protest, but no strike.

Teeth Extracted
NO PAIN

Dr. Bryson, the famous expert in the art of painless extracting, is now in Boston, to remain until June 1st, and will extract teeth exclusively in this office. Dr. Bryson has a national reputation for removing all teeth painlessly, ESPECIALLY ROOTS AND TEETH THAT ARE BROKEN DOWN AND DECAYED IN THE GUMS. He uses his own discovered method, which, beside making all extractions painless, instantly relieves neuralgia and any pain in or about the teeth. Many people believe Dr. Bryson's marvelous success in removing teeth is due to some hypnotic influence. This is a mistake. NOR HAS HE EVER CLAIMED THIS TO BE TRUE. That he is without an equal anywhere is acknowledged by all who have teeth extracted by him, also by those who witness the operations.

TAD On the Ground for the Boston American, Tells How Munroe Trains for FIGHT

Cartoonist Tad, of the BOSTON AMERICAN staff, has reached San Francisco, where he went to report for this newspaper the heavyweight championship battle between Jim Jeffries and Jack Munroe, which takes place on June 17.

The following story is the first of the series of articles written on the big fight by Tad. From time to time he will tell what progress the men are making in their training, and will keep BOSTON AMERICAN readers posted on the latest news of the big contest.

The fight itself will be reported by Tad, W. W. Naughton, the fight expert; the fighters themselves, the referee and other authorities on the sport. No point will be allowed to get away, and the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN will have the most complete and graphic accounts published.

BY TAD.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—If the price of eggs goes up in the near future you can blame Tim McGrath. The "Old Trainer" got a hunch from some one the other day that raw eggs were all to the good for a man in training, and now Jack Munroe is going to them like a weasel. Before every meal the miner is presented with five large specimens of hen fruit. Three times a day is the new food slipped to him and on each occasion Jack is there strong.

The road along the beach is strewn with shells and the tavern manager is advertising for stock. Talk about a fellow being all to the eggs, eh? That's stepping some. Tim says three other scrappers from the camp landed on the fat end of the sack in their fights with the new diet, and he can see no reason why the Butte Kid should not.

Raises Only Short-Enders.

"We don't raise anything but short-enders out here," chirped the trainer, "but we get away with them, don't we? In the last three fights we had Rodenbach, Nelson and Otts, all on the dinky end of the betting at 2 to 1. Where did they land, son? Did we not cop the kush?

"I guess the chickens ain't there, eh? Well, we have another one here in the old giant and after we crowd a few more eggs into his system he'll be able to lick Jeff, and all the rest of his training camp.

"The streak is on now and the short-enders are having their day."

Like Sharkey Once Was.

"Say," continued Tim as he pulled up his trousers, "this fellow reminds me of the old sailor, Sharkey, a lot, don't you know. Half the time I'm calling him Tom. I can't get it out of my mind that he is not the old deck scrubber. He works like him, fights like him, and is the same kind of big, strong fellow. You know I trained the old salt-water kid to go a hundred. Sharkey is the only man who ever went the distance with Jeffries twice, and just watch this fellow go. He beat the sailor quicker than Jeffries, and is getting better all the time, if you'll listen to me.

"Watch this guinea, Munroe, fellers. He is all to the merry, and will surprise a few."

BEAT KRAMER'S OLD RECORD

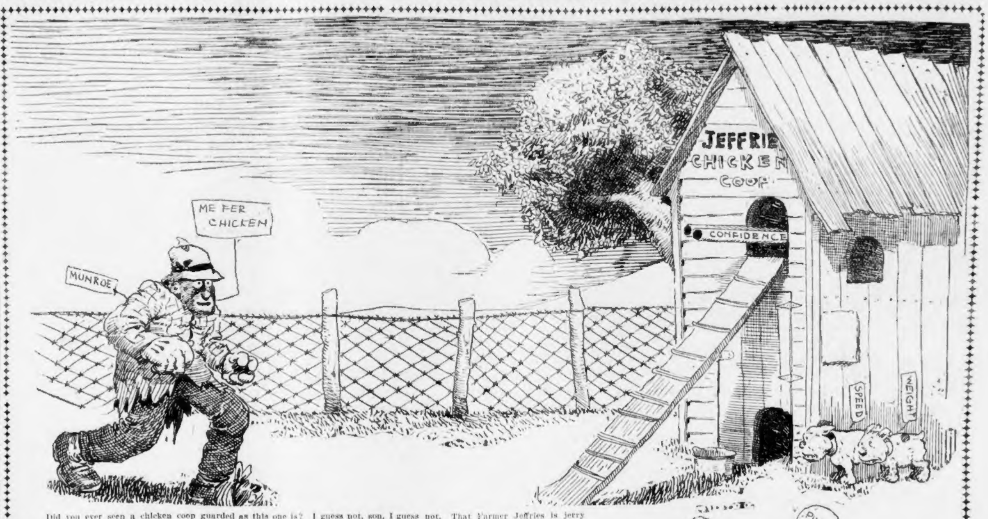
Special to the Boston American.

SALT LAKE, June 8.—William N. Samuelson, of Utah, broke the world's bicycle record for two miles in a competition race on the Salt Palace saucer track last night. Samuelson rode the distance in 3m. 58 4-5s., lowering by one second the previous record made by Kramer at Vailsburg.

PRESS GOLFERS TO MEET.

All the newspaper men that pretend to know anything about golf are expected to gather at a special meeting to-morrow night at 8 in the office of the Boston Globe to complete arrangements for the annual championship of the Press Club.

CARTOONIST TAD SHOWS WHERE THERE'S A FINE CHANCE TO COP A CHICKEN



Did you ever seen a chicken coop guarded as this one is? I guess not, son, I guess not. That Farmer Jeffries is jerry to a thing or two. His old coop is panning out pretty well lately and he's taking no chance with the coons who hang around with the hungry faces.

The man who cops the chicken from that house, guarded as it is, should be awarded the ton of opal and the case of "guinea paint" without even a question. See that gun of confidence guarding in front there. Pipe the dog of weight on the side and the other canine marked speed at his side. Where is there a house that has the watching this has?

Oh, there's more around the other side. There's experience, strength and past record around there. The smoke who lands the prize chicken from that must have more than Fitz, Corbett and Sharkey had.

DAINGERFIELD A SURPRISE

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, June 8.—There is much sorrow among the talent to-day and no end of satisfaction among the bookmakers. It's all on account of Major Daingerfield's victory in the Standard Stakes at Gravesend.

Africander and Hermis were backed by the talent almost to a person, and the Major was overlooked at odds of 6 to 1. So when he came home in front of the favorites, there was little cheering, and nothing but glum, disappointed faces could be seen.

SCHOOL CREW COMING HERE

Worcester High School boys will send its crew to Boston on Friday to take a trial spin on the Charles River before tackling Stone's School eight for the match race on Saturday. Worcester has been challenegd by Springfield High for a match race on June 17, in which case no entry will be made in the event for school eights in the Met's regatta.

HIGHBALL IN THE DERBY.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Turfmen are pleased with the news that Highball, the champion two-year-old colt of last year, will be a starter in the American Derby, to be run here on June 18. Word has been received from Owner Sheftel that the colt will be shipped from New York Sunday.

DELANEY SAYS JEFF WILL BE IN SHAPE FOR FIGHT

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

HARBIN SPRINGS, Cal., June 8.—Billy Delaney now makes the official announcement that Jeffries will be in grand shape for his contest with Monroe. Delaney, as every one knows, belongs to the old school of trainers, and there is no short cut to condition, according to the Delaney theory.

A fighter may boast of the way he feels, but if he is being handled by Delaney he will have to stand the test of several hours of gruelling work and come through it all without showing any particular symptoms of distress before Billy will admit that the man under his directions is fit to send into the ring.

After Delaney returned from a recent visit to San Francisco he watched Jeffries closely while at work.

"He is in great shape, and all he has to do is to hold his present notch," said Delaney. "He will probably take off a few pounds during the coming week, but even if he remains as big as he is it won't matter. His wind is good and I can see by his bag punching and sandbag work that he has plenty of vim for his training. He has shown me that he is in condition for any kind of a fight, and I am satisfied. I was quite surprised when I came back to find how his condition had improved."

To-day the champion went in for an eight-mile run over the dusty roads and took things easy for the balance of the day. From now on he will go in largely for boxing—that is, if present plans are adhered to.

Joe Kennedy's injured left arm has recovered to an extent that will permit the San Francisco heavyweight donning the gloves with the champion, and Jack Jeffries will also be on hand to take his turn cuffing his big brother during all the excitement of the sparring bouts.

Jim expects that the boxing during all this week will be of a lively character.

"I have been sparring these big fellows and taking it out of the punching bags, but it will be different from now on," said Jeff. "I am hungry for some good fast glove work and we are going to have it."

SCHEDULE FOR BOAT RACES

NEW LONDON, June 8.—If the weather is favorable June 30, the following schedule for the boat races between Yale and Harvard will be carried out:

10:30 a. m.—Yale '07 vs. Harvard '07, up stream for two miles, beginning at the railroad bridge; immediately following this race, the university four-oar crews will row up stream two miles, beginning at the finish of the freshman race; at 12:30 the university eights will row four miles down stream, finishing at the railroad bridge.

DARTMOUTH'S FINE RALLY.

AMHERST, June 8.—By a fine rally with the bat in the last two innings, Dartmouth's players scored three runs and defeated Amherst, 3 to 1.

MURRAY AND DALY MATCHED

They'll meet after all. A match was clinched today between George Murray of Lynn and "Fighting Johnny" Daly of Brooklyn to box fifteen rounds before the Lincoln A. C. of Chelsea, at Pythian Rink, Thursday night, June 9, at 122 pounds.

Daly has fought some of the best boys in New York, among them Eddy Lenny, twenty-round draw.

Daly will arrive Thursday morning with his manager.

The Chelsea sports are elated over the prospect of such a good match, at such a short notice. There will be three good six-round preliminaries before the main bout. First bout will be called at 8 sharp.

FORMER YALE MAN BEATEN.

NEW YORK, June 8.—H. H. Hackett, the former Yale tennis expert, was beaten in the Metropolitan tennis tourney two straight sets by S. C. Millett. The best match in the doubles was that in which Clarence Hobart, the veteran, and Millett beat Lovibund and Smith.

LITTLE FIGHTERS WANT BIG MONEY

NEW YORK, June 8.—Although bids for the McGovern-Hanlon battle closed yesterday the respective managers of the little fighters decided to wait a few days before making a final selection.

When Sam Harris, manager of Terry McGovern, and Bob Deady, manager of Hanlon, met at the American office, they had several bids awaiting them, but there was none that appealed to them. Several of the offers were from clubs where only six-round bouts are permitted. Hanlon and McGovern have signed articles to fight twenty rounds, and they have no desire to change the conditions. Each bid was gone over carefully, and after due consideration it was decided to give the San Francisco clubs a chance to bid for the contest.

If necessary, the date of the bout will be postponed from July to August or September. The Hays Valley Club was the only Frisco organization that managed to get its bid in on time. The club offered fifty per cent of the gross receipts and transportation. John Eckhardt sent an offer of a $6,000 purse for a six-round bout, on behalf of a Philadelphia Club. Edward W. White, of the Waltia A. C., of Chicago, offered a purse of $5,000 for a six-round battle.

Al Herford of the Eureka A. C., of Baltimore, offered sixty-five per cent of the receipts, and was prepared to post $1,000 as a guarantee that he would pull the bout off.

SCHAEFER LOSES LEAD.

PARIS, June 8.—In the second round of the international billiard match, Cure, the French expert, took the lead over Jake Schaefer. The score now reads: Cure, 1,000; Schaefer, 960.

CLARKSON HAS NOT BECOME A "PRO."

"It's a fake," was the answer given by Walter Clarkson, the Harvard pitcher, this morning to a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN who asked him in regard to the dispatch that Clarkson had signed a contract to play professional ball with the New York American League team at a salary of $8,000.

That is all the clever Crimson twirler would say, but the pertinent remark sufficed to make known the truth of the matter, and its terseness expresses more the annoyance that such unauthentic reports make for him.

When Captain Clarkson reached the training table, the members of the team were in a very much disturbed frame of mind at the prospect of their leader leaving them in the lurch, as the newspaper stories said that he was to join the New Yorks next week.

He soon dispelled the prevailing gloom by telling his men that there was no truth in the tale, and the serenity of the Harvard captain's career will continue till some other bright baseball manager comes out with a dream and claims Clarkson's services.

WANTED TO RACE FOR $50,000 ASIDE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Had it not been for the interference of P. J. Dwyer, who believes he acted for the best interests of the American turf, Stuyve, belonging to F. R. Lanterman, and Sheriff Bell, owned by Morris L. Hayman, would have been matched for the most sensational horse race ever known in this country.

John W. Gates offered to bet $50,000 that Sheriff Bell would defeat Stuyve, and Joseph Yaeger, the latest aspirant for honors as a turf plunger, promptly accepted, promising to wager $50,000 and as much more as Gates and his friends cared to place in jeopardy.

This proposal to make a match race for the great stakes came as a result of the sixth race at Gravesend last Saturday, when Gates is said to have lost $30,000 on Sheriff Bell.

Although he is a good loser, Gates found much fault with the way the favorite was handled.

Yaeger said: "Mr. Gates, I will take that bet of yours. But what is the use of 'piking'? Why not race for $100,000, and have it interesting?"

Gates said that $50,000 would do.

The owners of the two horses were willing to have the match go through, but when suggestions were made to the management of the Gravesend track, P. J. Dwyer, the principal stockholder of the company owning the track, immediately vetoed the plan. He referred to Sheriff Bell and Stuyve as second-rate horses at the best, and added that match races between selling platers is bad for the turf, and that sensational wagers, such as Gates and Yaeger proposed making, were worse.

BROKE ARM IN FIRST ROUND

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 8.—Joe Wagner, of New York, who at 1 o'clock this morning, after dodging the police, entered the ring for a twenty-round go with Harry Ruhlin, of this city, quit in the second round, his right arm being broken.

Ruhlin was much over weight and forfeited $100. Wagner had all the better of the first round, and at its close landed a swinging right on Ruhlin's jaw. It was this blow which broke his arm.

YANKEE YACHT TO SAIL FOR BIG CUP

LONDON, June 8.—In the race for the German Emperor's cup, from Dover to the Island of Heligoland, in the Baltic, on June 18, there have been nineteen entries received. The distance that the yachts will have to cover will be about 320 nautical miles. Undoubtedly the announcement that Commodore Morton F. Plant's schooner Ingomar would compete has done much toward the securing of so many boats for the race. The yachts will sail under the rules of the Yacht Racing Association of Great Britain, and will be handicapped under the same rules that govern the races for the King's Cup, which is held off Cowes at the Royal Yacht Squadron's Regatta.

Emperor William has designed the Heligoland cup himself, and will present it personally to the winner of the race. His Majesty will also present the additional prizes which will be given on a basis of one prize for every three starters.

The Ingomar will surely start in the race and afterward take part in the races at Kiel. Those who have seen the American boat figure under the measurement rules, she will be found a big boat, and probably be somewhere near the Meteor's class.

RAIN STOPPED BIKE RACE

A big crowd of bike fans went to Charles River Park to see the hour motor-paced race, but it was impossible for it to take place, on account of the rain, which made the track dangerous.

The event will be carried over till this evening, and the program includes amateur races. Before the rain stopped the sport the one-mile handicap was finished, and Burton Downing, the California wonder, got the decision from scratch by showing a grand burst of speed near the tape.

BASEBALL THIRD GAME WITH THE RED LEGS BOXING JEFFRIES IN FINE CONDITION RACING AND ALL ATHLETICS

MILLER HUGGINS, THE RED LEGS' GREAT SECOND BASEMAN.

Here are three good pictures of Miller Huggins, the clever second baseman of the Cincinnati team. They were taken by a BOSTON AMERICAN photographer at the Columbus avenue grounds. Huggins is considered one of the best in the game to-day and is improving in his work every week.

REDS HAVE GREAT PLAYER IN LITTLE MILLER HUGGINS

Ever since the season opened much has been said of the sterling qualities of Miller Huggins, the clever little second baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, who are now playing a series of games with the Bostons in this city.

Huggins's experience in the national game has not been long. He first started off with independent teams. With these organizations he was hailed as a marvel from every quarter, and a brilliant career was predicted for him.

After drifting from one semi-professional team to another for a couple of years he finally found a berth with Max Fleischmann's Catskill Mountaineers, the sponsor of that team now being one of the two owners of the Cincinnati Club. This Mountaineer Club was a losing venture, but Max merely conducted it for the good of the sport. This nine developed such crack players as White, the pitcher of the Chicago Colts, Dooin, catcher of the Philadelphia Quakers, and last of all, Miller Huggins was a product of this team.

Huggins's work with the Mountaineers was watched with interest by many clubs, the St. Paul team of the American Association League finally getting the drop on him for his signature to a contract. While with this nine he played phenomenal ball. He led the second basemen for all-around work. At the bat he knocked the horsehide around for an average of about .317. Last year, which was his last with the St. Pauls, he was a great factor in winning the pennant for that club. He batted his team to many a victory and his wonderful playing in the field frequently shut off what looked like sure runs.

The Reds then spurred for Huggins and landed him for a price of $4,000. So much confidence in Huggins's ability was held that the Reds failed to engage any other man in case he did not make good. But there hasn't been any question about his playing prowess from the start. He has covered all kinds of territory for the Reds, and what was the weakest spot on the nine last year is now regarded as about the most secure.

Huggins before joining professional ranks, graduated from Cincinnati University. After leaving college, he went to study law, and last Fall passed the bar before the Ohio State Board. Now, in all his spare time, Huggins visits Senator Foraker, who coaches him in the fine points of the law. The latter says that Huggins will turn out a clever lawyer. As he is now only twenty-six years old, Huggins should have a brilliant future in store for him as a lawyer, when he decides to forsake the diamond.

He was born in the Pork City and has lived there all his life. His father manages a grocery store, which is as large and as successful as any in the Hub. The father has always taken a warm interest in the welfare of his son, while the latter tries hard to please his dad. Miller Huggins is unmarried. He is popular with his teammates, as he is as straight as a die, and is always ready to do anything that will make an acquaintance a pleasant one.

SCHICK MAY RACE DUFFEY IN DASH

A feature of the Working Boys' Home games, June 18, at Apollo Gardens, Roxbury, will be a seventy-five-yard dash, in which two of the greatest sprinters in the country to-day will compete if they accept the invitation to enter.

Arthur Duffey, the 100-yard record holder, and William A. Schick, Jr., the intercollegiate champion, have yet to settle which is the better man, and the opportunity will come on the occasion of the picnic.

Schoolboys will be looked after, as a 440-yard dash and team race has been arranged, and all the school stars will be on hand for the events.

Chief among the entries in the three-mile scratch race is Ronald J. McDonald, of the Cambridgeport Gym, who won the Marathon run in 1898, and he will have a starry field to contend with, made up of Garry Brignolia, Fay, Bart Sullivan, McVicker, Bennie Jacobs, Wade, Hicks and other long distance horses.

Entry blanks may be obtained from Rev. Fr. James T. Landrigan, at the Working Boys' Home on Bennett street, or Charlesbank Gym. Entries close Monday night.

It is whispered that there will be some doings at the South End grounds this afternoon, when the Bostons and the Reds engage in their third battle of the present series. Joe Kelley says so, and others of the Red tribe also declare that there will be enough fast ball at the park this afternoon to please the most ardent fans.

The Reds have not yet gotten over the pretty coat of kalsomine administered them yesterday, and they are out for revenge. Brother "Pitt" and the umpire say the Porktown gang had them beaten before the start, and it wasn't any use for them to play at all.

The Reds are sore on the Beaneaters. The men from the Pork city are anxious to eat up the bean-crunchers. A fine layer of the "Porkies" will go well on top of a side of beans, say the friends of "Joe" Kelley.

But didn't the Reds move around the hotel this morning? No, they did not play poker, but they imagined they were doing things to Umpire Johnstone, the arbitrator that helped to drag them to defeat.

Among the ravers was Noodles Hahn, the Red pitcher, who has more fast and curvy benders than the average boxman. He swore and swore, until he thought he'd die. He placed one hand on the sacred book of Fandom and took an oath, before the other members of the Red aggregation, that he would pinch a victory from the Bostons this afternoon. "Noody" was looking all to the good as he emerged from his boudoir this morning. He had the appearance of some lord of high degree. He said that overnight he had mixed up a new assortment of balls, not highballs, and he would keep them out of the reach of the Tenneyites in this afternoon's session. Noodles's highball, that's all!

Peitz will probably wear the chest protector and mask in favor of the "Cincis" this afternoon. It is said that he will be used on account of his racy hitting of late.

But will Hahn do the Beaneaters up brown? Brother Buckenberger said he won't. The latter has "Vic" Willis, the lanky man of thediamond, as the card against this man Hahn. "Will" is a great favorite with the matinee crowd, and he'll make a hit with the ladies whether he makes a bungle or not.

HEAVY FOG MARS HUB MEN'S PRACTICE

A heavy fog hung over the National League Grounds this morning, and the few players who had the courage to show up for the practice stunt did not over-exert themselves. Possibly the boys are somewhat elated over the trimming that they administered to the Cincinnati Reds yesterday, and think that they can turn the trick any time that they want to.

The team is a good deal handicapped by the loss of Jim Delehanty, the third baseman. Young Delehanty is suffering from an attack of malaria, and will not be able to play for some days.

Yesterday he came out to watch the game, and took a seat in the grand stand, and caught more cold. Manager Buckenberger went down to the hotel this morning to see how he was getting on.

Victor Willis will be in the points to-day fo rthe Hubtown team, and Pat Moran will give the fans a few samples of his old-time style behind the plate.

Between the Innings.

Red was not the prevailing color yesterday.

* * *

When Umpire Johnstone gave two or three questionable decisions, the prevailing color was blue, as far as the Porktown tribe were concerned. My! Didn't they fume in a blue rage.

* * *

The Reds little expected a white-wash at the hands of the unsettled Bostons.

* * *

Both teams played as pretty ball as the most fastidious would expect.

* * *

* * *

"Pat" Moran was a snappy third-baseman, so the fans said that saw him in the position. Anyhow he carried himself much better than his predecessor. A utility man is "Pat."

If the Reds won yesterday, and the Giants and the Colts had lost, the Reds would have jumped to the top of the National pennant heap.

* * *

Huggins, the scrappy little second-baseman, put up a corking good game. Out of four times up, he made two slick singles, got his base on balls, and flied out to left-field. The latter smash was good for three bases at least, if it had not been for the superb work of "Dick" Cooley. Huggins had three put outs and two hard assists to his credit. All the liners that come his way have their Huggins, all right.

* * *

Cannell put up an unusually good game. Out of three times with the willow in his clutches, he smashed out a single and scored one of the Boston's brace of runs. He didn't have any chances in his garden to mow down anything. Better crop next time, "Wirt."

HETTY G. REPORTED SOLD

NEW YORK, June 8.—A rumor that won't down is that Hetty G., 2:05¼, has been sold to European parties. Nobody seems to know anything definite about it, yet the foreigners have purchased one or two from the Empire City contingent, notably Nelly Gay, 2:11¾, that is now over 'seas. Hetty G. will keep on winning races till the papers pass, rest assured.

COLSON'S WORK IS BEGINNING TO TELL

Special to the Boston American.

HARVARD CREW HEADQUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 8.—More life and drive is noticeable in the work of the Harvard varsity crew. Ability to raise the stroke as high as thirty-six to the minute sent the shell through the water at a clip that pleased Coach Colson.

There is still some fault of checking between strokes at the high rate, but when the crew drop to thirty the boat moves along like well oiled machinery.

For the first time the varsity eight was sent over the four-mile course, just to get a line on the shape of the men. The conditions were not of the best, but the try-out was made just the same.

When the word was given the freshmen were there to act as pacemaker for two miles, and the second varsity took up the work for the final half of the distance. For the whole four miles the stroke was kept above thirty, which shows that Colson's work is beginning to make itself evident. The time was 23 minutes 55 seconds, which is not fast by any means, but considering the adverse conditions of wind and tide, the result gave much hope for the future.

Pick-ups From the Diamond

"Cy" Seymour goes after every-thing. Even home run drives he tries to get under.

* * *

Barney Dreyfuss is sorry now that he let Poole separate from him, as Hanlon's bunch is benefiting by the deal with the ex-Red player.

* * *

Umpire Johnstone is a stickler on rule enforcement. He fined a player for rubbing a new ball in the mud.

* * *

Osteen, the latest recruit to the New York ranks, led the Eastern League at bat. Ten hits in his last five games was batting a bit.

* * *

"Tommy" Dowd will play in his own town hereafter. Holyoke has secured his release from New Orleans, and "Tommy" will join the Connecticut League champions this week.

* * *

That New Jump ball that Jack Townsend tried to use in Beantown, worked beautifully in the game with the White Sox, but it could not fool the Hub "Champs."

* * *

Hans Wagner, the Pirates' wonder-ful shortstop, severely strained his back in the Brooklyn game Saturday, and had to undergo massage treatment to get back into shape.

* * *

Manager "Jimmy" Collins always picks out Pitcher Norwood Gibson to do the slab work on "Ladies' Day." In Cleveland they say the poses that this young pitcher struck last Ladies' Day were enough to make any model jealous.

TWIN TO MEET ANDY WALSH

NEW YORK, June 8.—Andy Walsh, the Brooklyn middleweight, and Jack (Twin) Sullivan have been matched to meet for fifteen rounds at 158 before the West End A. C. in St. Louis on Thursday night next. On Sullivan's last appearance in St. Louis he was knocked out by Jack O'Brien. Walsh in his time has fought and defeated some of the cracks in the middleweight division, and he should give the New England man a hard run for the money.

YALE CREWS LEAVE TO-DAY

NEW HAVEN, June 8.—Yale crews had a day off preparatory to making the journey to Gales Ferry to-day, the scene of hard practice till the big race with Harvard.

After a conference of the coaches, a change in the mid section of the boat was decided upon, which was brought about by the enforced vacancy of Chase at No. 5. Morse will move up to No. 5, and Duncan Maier gets his place at No. 3.

There seems to be considerable back of the report that Con Daly, who has rowed off and on Yale's varsity crews, will now secure a permanent seat, and he is likely to displace Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., on the No. 2 slide.

Pick a Wife With Care.

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WHEN a young man begins to feel that he is becoming seriously interested in a girl he had better put a check on his affections until he finds out just what kind of a girl she really is.

He probably sees her every evening, daintily dressed, smiling and sweet. The room is the perfection of cosy neatness. He says to himself, "This is how it will be when we are married; she will make our little home just as daintily attractive as this; she will always be waiting for me with a smile of welcome; in other words, this is the girl of girls for me."

Before asking this paragon of virtue to cast in her lot with his I would advise him to call on her directly after breakfast.

Sometimes the girl who appears irrestible at 9 p. m. will be anything but that at 9 a. m.

If she is the right kind of a girl she will be just as trim and neat at the breakfast table as she is when dressed for callers in the evening.

If she appears with her hair half combed and screwed up any fashion, her shirt waist soiled, her shoes unlaced and an alarming disconnection between her shirt waist and skirt, then she is not at all the right sort of girl, and I would advise the man to pass her by, no matter how pretty she may be.

If she reads novels while her mother clears the breakfast table and washes the dishes, do you think she will make the right kind of a wife for a man who has his way to make in the world?

The beauty of a Venus would not compensate for a slovenly house and badly cooked meals.

Before promising all to his future wife a man should be pretty sure that he has chosen the right kind of a girl.

The first quality to look for is sympathy. The sympathetic woman stands the test of almost any crisis in life.

To be sympathetic means to be gentle, broad-minded and able to put yourself in another's place.

Choose a girl who is kind to old people, children and animals.

A Slight Mistake.

"Yes, your honor," said the witness, "I wuz hit with brass knucks, an iron maul an' lammed 'side the head with a fence rail!"

"Your honor," said the defendant in the case, "the man's plumb crazy an' dunno what he's a-talkin' 'bout! Only thing in the world that happened to him wuz this: A young mule—a pet o' the family—in a playful speerit, backed him into the fence corner an' fetched him lightly 'side the head with its two heels!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Pretty Girls of Boston!

SEND IN YOUR PHOTOGRAPHS.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN has been asked by numerous correspondents to name the prettiest girl in Boston. The question is herewith passed along to the readers of the AMERICAN for them to decide. A half hour's walk on any of the leading streets of our city, in the Common, the Public Garden, the Parks, Commonwealth avenue and in the adjacent suburbs, discloses the fact there are more pretty young women and girls to be found in and about Boston than in any other city in the United States.

So that the readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN may form themselves into a great jury to decide the question, we request that photographs, properly authenticated, be sent to the BEAUTY EDITOR, BOSTON AMERICAN Office, 80 and 82 Summer Street.

THE STEPMOTHER;

OR, TWO LITTLE SAILOR BOYS.

ADAPTED FROM WALTER HOWARD'S PLAY, "TWO LITTLE SAILOR BOYS."

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Admiral Grey, who has recently married a young woman, has two children who do not like her, Cyril, a boy of fifteen, and Mildred, who is in love with the young captain of her father's ship, Noel Tregarthen. He comes to ask for her hand. Lieutenant Redstone, of the same ship, is also in love with her and swears she shall never be Noel's wife. Cyril meets a poor little boy called Tom Foster, whom he gives a glass of milk.

CHAPTER V.

"We're Both Alike There."

A MAN and boy crouched behind the stone wall near the entrance to the grounds. The man's face was seamed and prematurely old. Evil fires burned in the deep set eyes. His clothes were ill-kept and dusty from his trudging on the sunburnt open road from the outlying farm lands. He pointed to the driveway leading to the port cochere of the handsome, old-fashioned house and whispered in a hoarse voice to his companion, then slipped around the corner of the wall and disappeared. The boy whom he had left at the entrance shuffled into the wide, shining path, with steps that flagged. Cyril Grey, who came whistling from the Summer house at that moment, stopped short, and his merry whistle trailed away into silence at the sight.

An odd, bent little figure, aged, like the face, from experience, not years, a ragged suit of clothes that had been discarded by a man and were pinned here and there in a piteous attempt to fit them to the lean little form, a disreputable old cap, half hiding a tangle of brown curls, and lighting the begrimed face the most beautiful eyes Cyril Grey had ever seen.

"Prettier even than your bonny blue ones," he said to Mildred afterward. "But they had something in them that made a fellow all choke up. They looked at me the way old Rover's did the time the boys on Concord street were throwing stones at him because, they said, he was a rich man's dog."

The boy shuffled forward with a half timid half bold air.

"Beg pardon! Will you please let me have a glass of water?"

The small, husky voice deepened the impression made by the pleading brown eyes. Cyril Grey answered with hearty voice.

"Are you thirsty, old chap?"

"Yes, sir. I've been tramping all morning and my tongue is burning like a coal."

"Sit down there and rest." Cyril pointed to the green seclusion of the vine-covered Summer house. "I'll bring you something to drink from the house."

Left alone the boy started up and looked furtively and shame-facedly toward the house. He peered out of the Summer house door, then sank down again deprecatingly into the corner. Cyril had returned and was proffering him a brimming glass of milk.

"Thank you, sir!" The words seemed to choke him and his face grew pale under the grime. "Ah, that's real milk, so it is—we don't get it like that where I come from."

"Where do you come from?"

"Nowhere, sir."

"What?"

"I mean anywhere, sir."

"Don't call me sir. I'm only a half-grown boy like yourself. Where are you going now?"

The boy shifted his feet and miserably hung his head.

"Just tramping, sir."

"Alone?"

"No. He's with me."

"Who is he? Your father?"

"He calls himself my father, but he ain't no more than you are."

The strong white teeth gleamed, the brown eyes took on the sheen of metal, and Cyril thought of mild Rover's ferocious face as he turned upon his tormentor.

"Where is your mother?"

"God knows! I can't tell you."

"Poor old chap!" Cyril's strong white hand fell upon the lad's shoulder. "No mother." He sighed. "Anyway we're both alike there."

"What. Ain't you got no mother?"

"Only a step-mother, but I have no love for her, nor has she any for me."

"Why? Ain't she good to you? I could love anybody that was kind to me. I could soon love you."

"Why?" Cyril smiled absently. "Because I gave you a glass of milk?"

"No, I wasn't thinking of the milk, although you were kind to give it to me. It was the kind way you spoke to me, a tramp, called me old chap, just as though I was one of the fellow's of your school. I shan't forget you. You've put pluck into me to do something I wouldn't dared do before."

"What's that?"

"I can't tell you exactly, but I come into this garden to do something for him." The boy's face lowered. A sullen, ugly shadow flitted over it as he referred to the sinister man he knew was waiting for him. "When I tell him I haven't done it he'll thrash me black and blue, I expect. But I don't care now. I won't do it. So help me God, I won't."

He took off his tattered cap and raised his face, gray with determination, to the sky.

"Won't you tell me what it was?" Cyril Grey asked, curiously.

The boy's face fell.

"No; I daren't."

"Tell me your name at any rate."

"My name is Tom—Tom Foster, they call me, because Tom's his name. But it ain't mine. I'm dead sure of that."

"Well, mine's Cyril—Cyril Grey. My father is Admiral Grey, of the United States Navy, and we live here, so if you're ever thirsty again, Tom, ring at the door there under the vines and ask for me."

"I thank you. I won't forget your name. I can't write it down on paper, because I can't write, nor read, either, but I've set it down here."

The child's talon-like fingers clutched the rags over his heart.

"I'll keep the name of Cyril Grey there as long as I live. Good-by."

Cyril put forth his hand in hearty boy fashion.

"Good-by, Tom, old chap! The best of luck to you."

He stood a sturdy young figure in his snow-white flannels and his sailor hat. His blue eyes sparkled with health. The sunbeams lost themselves in the gold of his hair. He smiled cheerily at the stunted, ragged child who was slinking back into a place among life's shadows. The brown eyes looked at him lingeringly, a dog-like devotion in their sad depths.

"Good-by. You've done more for me than you know, sir. Good-by, Cyril Grey."

CHAPTER VI.

"Such Women Die Hard."

CYRIL'S reflections upon the sad lot of Tom Foster were disturbed by the sound of his father's voice.

"Let us go to the lawn and smoke our cigars in the open. We want to hear about your adventures, Noel—all these wonderful things you have seen and done."

"Yes, let's hear about the Philippines, Noel. Did you ever see Aguinaldo? Why didn't you crack your pistol at him, just for me? And were you really on board one of Admiral Dewey's ships at the siege of Manila?"

"Yes, Cyril."

"What an experience, Noel!" Milly's voice had in it the thrill of terror. "How can you ever forget it?"

"I shall never forget it, Milly, because it was shortly after the fall of Manila, and connected with it in my thoughts will always be the loss of Tom Yorke. He was the best friend man ever had, the bravest, truest soldier who went to his death in all that terrible time."

Milly moved closer to her fiance and looked at him with tender eyes.

"Would it pain you to tell us his story, Noel?"

"No, dear. He was the captain of a volunteer company. There wasn't a man in his company who wouldn't gladly have laid down his life for him. We met soon after his transport arrived, and were friends from the moment we met."

"What was he like, Noel?"

Milly leaned forward in her interest. The Admiral, Redstone and Cyril were intent upon the story. No one heard the rustle of the old rose gown, nor saw Mrs. Grey saunter toward the group in the shadow of the old cedar tree, clasping a branch in her rigid fingers while Noel Tregarthen told his story.

"He was a big, dark chap, standing over six feet, with a splendid sweep of shoulders. There was a deep scar stretching diagonally across his left cheek. He laughed at it one day and told me it was the mark of a playful little attention from one of Geronimo's band. 'Merely a savage love pat,' he said. I hadn't known him a week before I saw that the poor chap's heart was breaking."

"Poor devil!" The Admiral lit a fresh cigar. "I knew a fellow like that once. It was the fault of a woman."

"And so was this," answered Captain Tregarthen. "Whenever a midnight sortie was to be made or any dangerous work to be done, Captain Yorke was always the first to volunteer. I could see that he was looking for death, longing for it, and yet it always seemed to turn away at sight of him."

"But it came at last, Noel?" asked Milly.

"Yes, it came at last. The Filipinos, who had been teasing our lines, suddenly shifted their positions. The commanding officer wanted to locate them. Captain Yorke was the first to volunteer. At midnight we slipped out of our lines, ten soldiers and ten marines, under his command."

"Then you volunteered, too?" Admiration mingled with the terror in Mildred Grey's eyes.

"Yes, Milly. We marched on, sometimes crawling on our hands and knees, but always advancing, till we came upon the sentinel line of the enemy. A sharp crack over the head with our guns, and the sentinels commenced their endless nap."

Milly shivered. "How cruelly you speak of it, Noel."

"That is war, my love," answered Captain Tregarthen. "Suddenly, after we had passed the lines, the whole hillside seemed to spring ablaze. Bullets sang in a rain about our ears. Six of our men went down with the first volley, and I got one in the leg. Yorke gave the order to retreat, but before I could rise a couple of Filipinos dashed down upon me. Yorke drew his sword and slashed the pair down before they could gasp. Catching one of their horses he threw me into the saddle, jumped on behind, and away we went galloping like mad in the darkness. Ping! Ping! The spiteful voices of the bullets shrieked the death song in our ears. It grew louder, more determined, and that was the only time I ever heard Tom Yorke laugh. In half an hour we were back in camp. When he pulled up the horse poor Yorke fell to the ground without a word.

For a Girl Who Would "Make Up."

BY ADELE O. LEHR.

DEAR MISS LEHR:

Some time ago you printed in your column a formula for a liquid rouge to be used in stage make-up, and although I clipped out the article, I mislaid it, and so beg of you to repeat it. B. J.

THE following is doubtless the formula to which you refer, and I take pleasure in repeating it for your benefit as well as for the benefit of others who may desire a liquid rouge which is said to defy detection when applied to the cheeks:

Pure brandy, 1 pint; red sandal wood, 1 ounce; alum, ½ ounce; benzoin, ½ ounce; Brazil wood, ½ ounce. Put all together in a bottle, cork tightly; agitate thoroughly once daily for about ten days or two weeks, then decant and use. Apply with a bit of absorbent cotton. It is necessary the moment the first touch of artificial color is given to the face to bring up the adjacent features to harmonize with one another. A startlingly white nose cuts the face in two; so a touch of rouge, deftly blended, is needed on the nostrils; if the nose be large, a very little on the sides will lessen its prominence. The chin, and the lobes and edges of the ears, too, must be touched with the rouge, very delicately, and in a rotary motion, which will make streaks impossible and leave no edges.

Let one rule be unvarying in all make-up: The skin must be rubbed with pure white vaseline, cold cream or oil before any powder, rouge or liquid paint is applied, for this will protect the skin in a degree from the injurious effects.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Kindly advise me as to what would be right to do in this case. If a young man is married, and is left alone in his home twice a year, five and six weeks at a time, do you think it all right for him to go to parties and dances? When we are together, we like to go and enjoy ourselves. And would it be right to walk home with a lady friend? If this is not the right thing to do, please tell me. I like to be in the company of young people, and it is very lonesome to be alone for so long.

E. W. F.

CERTAINLY. Go out into society whenever you wish to. There is no reason why you should not enjoy yourself because your wife is away, provided you remember always that you are a gentleman, and act like one. Conduct yourself properly and you may go when and where you please.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-seven years of age, and am keeping company with a young lady of twenty-two. I would like to get married, but I only earn $1.50 a day, and have no prospects of earning more, not having a trade. Do you think I could live on that, or what should a man earn before getting married? B. H. F.

Fitchburg, Mass.

I CANNOT and do not advise you to get married on that amount of money. It would be almost impossible for you both to live on that sum. If you wish to get married and truly love the young lady, you should have enough ambition to learn a trade and earn more money. Such a thing is not impossible. Marrying in your present condition would mean nothing but a life of drudgery for your wife, as well as yourself.

Baked Asparagus.

A MOST delicious dish is baked asparagus. Cut the tender ends of the stalks into inch long pieces and cook them about fifteen minutes. Drain them and save the water in which they are cooked for the soup kettle. Arrange the asparagus in alternate layers in a buttered baking dish with fine bread crumbs, bits of butter, salt and pepper and dice-shaped pieces of hard-boiled eggs. Sprinkle the top of the dish with buttered crumbs and bake twenty-five minutes. Send to the table in the baking dish. Individual ramekins may be used instead of a large dish.

Sounded Like a Yell.

"How do you like that college song Miss Screecher is singing?"

"Is that a college song? I thought it was a college yell."—Puck.

Complexion Lotion.

Half a pint of the best alcohol; two ounces of spirits of camphor; two ounces of spirits of ammonia and five ounces of sea salts. After you have all these mixed add enough boiling water to make a quart in all.

Bottle, cork tightly and shake before using.

If well rubbed into the face daily it will strengthen the muscles and so keep away wrinkles.

Not That Kind of Oats.

"He is beginning to feel his oats now."

"Good! In excellent trim, is he?"

"No; unfortunately, it's his wild oats he's beginning to feel now!"—Houston Post.

For the Busy Housewife.

A SMALL quantity of ordinary cider vinegar (in the proportion of one tablespoonful to a quart) added to Boston baked beans before putting them in the oven will be found to give an improved flavor. Moist brown sugar may be substituted for molasses with very good results, the degree of sweetness to be decided by taste.

The discoloration of wall paper from pictures or plaques can be avoided by placing behind them a tiny roll of wadding whenever pictures have been moved to be brushed and cleansed from dust. For light wall paper use white pale gray wadding; for the dark-colored papers the darker battings answer very well.

Table silver, such as knives, forks and spoons, can be made to retain its new, unscratched look indefinitely by being provided with little chamois cases, in which they can be slipped after being properly washed. These cases are easily made. They take a little time and trouble at first, but last for years, and their use becomes a habit. Canton or outing flannel may be substituted for the chamois, if preferred.

Nothing makes better scrub cloths than old stockings or socks. When too far gone to mend cut them open, lay two seams together and run by hand or machine until you have made a square. Cut off all loose ends. They are excellent also for use with mop handle, taking up the water thoroughly and with little exertion.

It is well to keep on hand a yard or so of damask from which to pull threads for mending table linens. When these are bought (as they commonly are nowadays) by the pattern there is no chance for the "trimmings" which used to fall to the lot of the buyer in getting them in shape. The ravelings from this class of goods make a darn which is practically imperceptible after laundering.

Pie and cake can be kept fresh for a week by placing between two plates, around which a heavy towel has been wrapped, and then put in the lower part of a refrigerator. Cake, especially, comes out from this treatment much more moist and tender than if kept in a tin box.

In a small flat kitchen there is usually no separate cupboard in which the flatirons can be kept between washdays away from the steam of the daily cooking. Much of the greasy coating and the rust which results from this cause can be obviated by drawing stout brown paper bags over them directly they are cool and keeping them thus wrapped until again needed.

With Summer coming on both comfort and economy in gas bills can be assured by folding towels and flannel underwear and "mangling" them in the clothes wringer, instead of pressing them with hot irons.

Shawls for Summer.

SHAWLS of Summer weight, all wool, yet woven to an exquisite degree of lightness, are to be had at reasonable prices. A small, fine, unknotted fringe is the only finish, but this serves to indicate the quality of the web. About one and three-quarters square is the size of these wraps, just the thing to take with one on a day trip, or to have handy on the back of one's piazza chair, to be fortified against sudden changes of temperature.

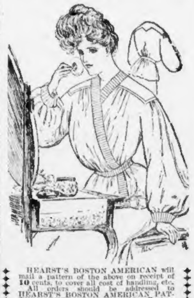
More Fresh Air.

"IT is safe to say," declared a physician, "that one-half of the women are simply starving for fresh air, and if they would throw away their pill bottles and headache powders and exercise freely in the open air for at least two hours daily they would feel like new women at the end of a year. Nature cannot be cheated, nor can impaired forces be restored by swallowing medicine every time warning pain and illness overtakes the offender. A busy woman may be compelled to neglect some duty or pleasure for a time in order to obtain the outdoor exercise, but under the circumstances it will be excusable, and in the long run she will make up for it because of increased bodily vigor."

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN

LADIES' DRESSING SACK

Now that the warm afternoons are at hand, the cool, comfortable dressing sack will be much in demand. The one illustrated here today is a very pretty design in surplice style. The season's fancy of long shoulder line is carried out by a collar in yoke effect. The pattern is very simple to make up, and is particularly effective in challie, silk and any of the light-weight Summer materials.



HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail a pattern of the above on receipt of 10 cents, to cover all cost of handling, etc. All orders should be addressed to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

Kindly write name and address plainly. Sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

POURING FROM ALL SIDES COME BRICK And Brick and a Half ANSWERS

MORE puzzle solutions.

The way the answers to the great brick problem continue to pour in is wonderful.

Or, it would be wonderful were it not for the remarkable fascination which attaches to the proposition.

Read it:

IF A BRICK WEIGHS SEVEN POUNDS AND A HALF A BRICK, HOW MUCH DOES A BRICK AND A HALF WEIGH?

Now you think you have it.

The next minute you're not quite so sure.

By this time you are covering paper with calculations, fractions, decimals and other things.

Now you will write out your solution and sent it to the Puzzle Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN.

That's the usual programme.

Here are other answers:

Cuts It to Six.

Puzzle Editor: I find that one brick weighs four pounds, consequently one brick and a half will weigh six pounds. E. B. CUTTEN,
No. 40 Hancock st.

Calls "Jack of Boston."

Puzzle Editor: If Jack of Boston, "Roslindale," will only put up with you the money he wants to bet that 15¾ pounds is the right answer to your brick puzzle, I will be only too pleased to cover it; also prove where he is wrong, by his own figures.
No. 6 Berwick park, city. W. I. AUSTEN.

Send the Money, Says He.

Puzzle Editor: In answer to your brick puzzle I am sure it is 15¾ pounds. Send the money, the mills are all stopped here. O. J. TROTTIER.
1238 South Main street, Fall River.

Hope This Will Be All Right.

Puzzle Editor: "I don't like you any more," you didn't print my solution of the brick puzzle which was sent to you when the puzzle first came out in your paper, of which I am a constant reader, both weekday and Sunday. I will now reproduce it. Your puzzle reads, If a brick weighs seven pounds and a half ("a brick" should be left out, as it sounds ungrammatical), how much does a brick and a half weigh?

If a brick weighs 7½ pounds
One-half a brick weighs 3¾ pounds

Therefore a brick and a half equals 11¼ pounds
CONSTANT READER.

If you don't add this to your list of contestants I won't take your nice paper any more, so there.

Calls It Two Times.

Puzzle Editor: If a brick weighs seven pounds and a half a brick, a brick and a half must weigh two times seven pounds, which is fourteen pounds and two half bricks. N. F.
Gardner.

Weighed It Himself.

Puzzle Editor: In regard to the brick puzzle in the BOSTON AMERICAN I sent two answers and neither one has been published. The first one I sent over a week ago, in which I said a brick and a half weighs seven pounds, and the other answer I sent was this: If a brick weighs seven pounds and a half a brick, how much does a brick and a half weigh? You say, if a brick weighs seven pounds and a half a brick, why the brick weighs seven pounds, and I weighed a half brick which I found weighed two pounds and a half. Which of course makes a brick and a half weigh 9½ pounds. C. N. FOWLER.
South Seabrook, N. H.

Let It Go at 10¾.

J. B. C., 35 Lee street, Cambridge.
E. K. FANNING, 335 Dexter street, Providence.

"Seven Pounds and Half a Brick."

These cling to the seven pounds and half a brick theory:

MATTHEW MORIARTY, Boston.
"BRICK TOP," West Warren.

JOSEPH KERNS, Canal street, City.
"MRS. H.", Providence.

These hold to 10½ pounds as the true solution:
W. F. SMALL, 19 Woonasquatucket, Providence.
S. A. HENDERSON, Jr., 27 Edinboro street, city.
THOS. JENNINGS, (10 years old), 174 Plant street, Fall River.

T. J. MACNALLY, 38 Fowler street, Dorchester.
JOHN L. LAWRENCE, Decatur street, Boston.
"MUGGINS," Arlington.

Weighed Them All.

Puzzle Editor: In answer to your brick puzzle. You say "if a brick weighs 7½ pounds," now the average brick weighs 4 pounds, is 6 inches long, 4 inches wide and 2 inches thick. I do not know of any brick weighing 7½ pounds.
MISS LUCY A. GARDNER.
177 Killingly street, Providence.

Does It Backward.

Puzzle Editor: Here is another: If a brick weighs 7 pounds and a half a brick, then a brick and a half would weigh 7 pounds and a brick.
Charlestown, Mass. F. FREEMAN.

Take You Long?

Puzzle Editor: There are two halves to the brick and I studied it out and got 7 times 2⅛ which are 14⅛. Answer, 14½ pounds. H. SALISBURY.
9 Ocean street, Providence.

Two From One Family.

Puzzle Editor: This is my solution:

$X =$ weight of brick.

$\frac{X}{2} =$ weight of ½ brick.

$$7 + \frac{X}{2} = X$$
$$14 + X = 2X$$
$$-X = -14$$
$$X = 14. \text{ Answer.}$$

13 Gordon street. J. B. DELAND.

This is mine: If a brick weighs 7 pounds and ½ a brick, ½ brick weighs 3½ pounds and ¼ brick; 1½ bricks weigh 10½ pounds and ¾ brick. 10½ pounds and ¾ of a brick—Answer.
DORRIS E. LELAND.

COMMITTEE EXPECTS TO CHOOSE BOYS' TEAMS JUNE 17

Many Applications Received by High School Athletic Committee for Entrance.

Good Teams Assured for the Hearst Trip to St. Louis Fair.

IT is expected that the team of Public Schoolboys who will go as the guests of Congressman William Randolph Hearst to compete in the athletic carnival to be held the first week in July at the St. Louis Fair will be decided upon by June 18.

Good teams of both High School and Grammar boys are assured. The High School athletic committee, which is composed of Masters Casey, Lincoln and Mann, have received many applications for entrance.

Nearly all of the High School boys who are eligible for the World's Fair contest will be competitors at the Dorchester High School meet, to take place at the Dorchester grounds on the afternoon of June 17. A. S. Perkins, who is in charge of the athletics of that school, has this meet in charge, and any boy who wishes to compete should communicate with him.

SCHOOLBOY ATHLETES TRAINING.

The Dorchester competition will be one of the most interesting athletic events of the season in Boston, and a great crowd will be there to cheer the boys to do the best that is in them. One of the contestants at this meet will be Farrell, of the Mechanic Arts High School, who won the mile run at the interscholastic athletic games at Harvard. He will be a good candidate for the St. Louis trip. Look out for Farrell!

Dorchester's Good Showing.

Other Dorchester High School boys made a good showing at the Harvard games. Jackson and McBeath were well up in the 440 yard run, and Callanan and Seeley were heard from in the shot put.

Another Dorchester boy who has made an exceedingly good record is Henry Colton, who recently won the first prize in the meet of that school with the Mechanic Arts in the broad jump, he surprising everybody by jumping nineteen feet.

Young Colton, who is the son of the Rev. A. F. Colton, of the American Bible Society, is fullback on the Dorchester High football team, president of his class, '04, and with a friend is getting up a class book on original lines for the High Schools.

Minister Praises Project.

The Rev. and Mrs. Colton are very much interested in the athletic welfare of their son and would be very glad if he were chosen as one of the boys to represent Boston at the St. Louis Fair.

In discussing the schoolboy athletic situation with regard to the St. Louis team, A. S. Perkins said:

"While it is true that the age limit has shut out several of our promising men, it is also true that the less famous athletes, who before thought that they had no chance, have been fired with a new enthusiasm, and about a dozen of them have joined the track team, increasing the squad to about thirty."

There will be handicap events for the Dorchester meet on June 17. For these it is expected that some of the crack Harvard athletes, like Le Moyne and Schick, will enter.

The Roxbury High School boys are also hard at work. The boys are under the instruction of Lyman G. Smith, and they expect to have a good showing on the St. Louis team.

Grammar Schools Interested.

The Grammar School boys are manifesting the greatest interest in the meet that is to be held on the afternoon of July 18 at the Charlesbank Grounds. As a result of this contest the Grammar boys who will attend the fair will be chosen.

Edward F. O'Dowd of the Grammar School on Dudley street, who has had a great deal of experience with Grammar School athletes, has charge of getting up the meet. Principals of Grammar Schools who have boys whom they wish to compete in this meet and go on the World's Fair team should send the names of the boys at once to Mr. O'Dowd.

Boys to enter the St. Louis games must stand well in their schools and have the indorsement of the principals. For the High School contests they must be under nineteen on July 4, and for the Grammar events, under fifteen.

HOW TO ENTER IN THE SCHOOLBOY CONTESTS

HERE is an entry blank that will be of interest to every schoolboy athlete in New England. By filling out the blank properly any schoolboy may participate in the Public School Olympian games that are to be held at St. Louis on July 4, 5 and 6.

Fifty cents for each entry must accompany the application. High School applicants must be under nineteen years of age and Grammar School boys under fifteen.

Those who enter their names on this blank will do so as individuals and not as the Public School Team of Boston. Parents who are going to take their boys to the Fair, anyhow, would do well to take them so that they will be in St. Louis on July 4, 5 and 6. These boys may send their entries, so that they will reach Mr. Sullivan by June 15.

TALKED TO HIM ON CAR; HE MISSES DIAMOND PIN

Ernest Kersten, of No. 110 Hillside street, was accosted by three young men while waiting for a car at Massachusetts avenue and Beacon street, who boarded the car and talked to him until they reached Huntington avenue. When the trio left he missed a valuable diamond scarfpin.

FIREMEN SEEK PROMOTION.

Twenty-two firemen and ten lieutenants were examined by Fire Commissioner Russell for promotion to the vacancy caused by the dismissal of Captain Adams of East Boston.

NEWSBOYS HELD FOR BREAK, AND $80 THEFT

Michael Dunne, of Main and Madison streets, Malden, had $80 in a tin box in his kitchen, and the back door was unlocked. When he missed the money the police arrested James Carney, fifteen years old, of No. 15 Charles street, and Edward Lawler, three years his junior, both newsboys. The police say that they found $78 on Carney. They suspect the boys of several breaks. Dunne is a grocer, and Carney was formerly in his employ.

TO SAVE LIFE OF BABES.

Boston is to have erected at Revere an incubator hospital to save the lives of prematurely born infants. Negotiations have been completed for the site. This new public institution is to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000. Its projectors are Drs. Samuel Schenkein and Martin A. Couney.

THE CHAPERON ON SOCIETY

Pierce-Jones Wedding Will Take Place This Evening at King's Chapel.

TO HAVE 4 BRIDESMAIDS

By the Chaperon.

MISS EDITH MAY JONES, who is the fashionable bride next on the large list of the current month, is departing from the usual custom to-day in the fact that her wedding to Mr. Edward LeRoy Pierce, of Cambridge, is to take place this evening at King's Chapel, which affair will call out a large and brilliant assemblage.

Miss Jones is to be attended by four bridesmaids and a matron of honor, and will be escorted to the altar by her brother, Mr. Arthur L. Jones, so prominently identified with the Harvard Medical School. Mr. Henry L. Pierce is to be best man. The ceremony is to be performed by the Rev. Howard N. Brown, rector of the chapel.

At the conclusion of their wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce are to take up their residence in Cambridge.

* * *

Mrs. Harry N. Farren, of Dorchester, left town yesterday for a visit to relatives in New York.

* * *

Mrs. Jack Gardner, "the veiled lady of the Fens," is to entertain quite extensively during the week of the Country Club races. Mrs. Jack always had a penchant for these races, but this year she plans to go into them more extensively than ever, and she has planned for a houseful of guests for the week. Among them will be Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hitchcock, who were with Mrs. Gardner for the races last season.

Just why Mrs. Gardner always assumes a veil when abroad has been a matter of conjecture to her friends for some time, but in conversation with her recently, I found out the reason, although she gave it rather reluctantly. It seems that Mrs. Jack has a great horror of being photographed by newspaper artists. She has been much troubled during the past two or three years by the "pests," as she terms them, and for that reason she always wears a veil.

There are many arrivals at the North Shore, although I can't see what attraction the shore or any other place except home, for that matter, has for people during this weather. Houses are daily being opened up and the place has almost assumed its midsummer aspect. Many of the houses have been renovated during the Spring and really look very attractive. Then there are a number of new cottages going up, and they are all of dainty and tasty architecture and promise to add much to the beauty of the place.

"Bobby" Shaw is the latest arrival of note. He opened his house at Beverly Farms yesterday, and intends to spend the whole summer there.

Then Mrs. John S. Gardner, with her two daughters and the Misses Paine have arrived. They are at Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. Daniel Ahl and her son Leonard are expected to-day at their Pride's Crossing place. Mrs. G. Harland Shaw and family, who have a place near the Ahls, arrived the first of the week.

* * *

Mrs. William G. Weld, who has been the guest of friends on Beacon street, returned yesterday to her Newport home.

* * *

Frank A. and Miss Isabel Rhodes, who have been spending several weeks in Providence as the guests of Mrs. Le Baron Colt, have returned to the city. Early next week they are to leave for their Summer home at Pride's Crossing.

THRONGS ENJOY MUSIC AT CLARENDON GARDEN

In spite of inclement weather, the Clarendon Garden, which adjoins the Hotel Clarendon in Tremont street, is thronged every evening. It has been a very popular Summer resort for years, and Andrew Anderson, proprietor, and G. E. Bolton, manager, have made it more pleasing to the eye than ever.

Hundreds of persons sat under the tent roof in the rosebush bordered pavilion last night and enjoyed the music of a well-trained orchestra. The place is illuminated by nearly 1,000 incandescent lamps.

"INGLESIDE'S" ANNUAL BENEFIT.

The annual reception and sale for the benefit of the "Ingleside," the Revere Heights shelter for homeless girls, will take place to-morrow at 148 Prospect avenue, Revere Heights, from 2 to 10 p. m. An informal entertainment will be given, and the home will be open for inspection.

HARVARD MEN WIN CECIL RHODES SCHOLARSHIP

It was announced to-day that eight students had passed the examination at Harvard for the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship, and that the scholarship award would be made by President Eliot this afternoon.

The Cecil Rhodes Scholarship is the result of a fund created by the South African millionaire several years ago, which makes it possible for one student from every State and Territory in this country to have a free scholarship at Oxford University.

Those who passed the examination held on April 5 were A. W. Belcher, Harvard senior, Plymouth; S. H. Fortes, Harvard senior, Lexington; H. N. Jones, Harvard senior, Cambridge; R. H. Keniston, Harvard senior, Somerville; J. P. Kirby, Braintree; L. H. Maxson, Boston University sophomore, Washington, D. C., and H. W. Russell, Harvard sophomore, Olean, N. Y.; H. H. Rowland, Harvard sophomore, Cambridge.

SOUTH END SOCIETY AT MURPHY-DAILEY WEDDING

Society of the South End was in Holy Cross Cathedral this morning at the wedding of Miss Mamie Dailey to Thomas C. Murphy. The bride and bridegroom are accomplished church singers and members of Holy Cross choir.

The ceremony took place at 8:30. Nuptial high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Michael J. Splaine, D. D., assistant chancellor of Boston archdiocese. Miss Anna G. Dailey, sister of the bride, and former contralto soloist in the Cathedral choir, was bridesmaid. William Murphy, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

"LOST" 9 FIND SHIP IN PORT.

Two hours after their vessel, the Ida M. Silva, had crept into T wharf with flag at half-mast and reported their loss, the nine sailors given up as dead sailed into port on the schooners Costa and Sea Fox, by whom they had been picked up on Monday.

For Political Dishonesty ALL of the People Are Responsible.

The Death of Senator Quay Reminds Us That the National Sense of Honor Is Loose Politically.

It is not necessary, in speaking of the late Senator Quay, to enumerate in detail the various charges against him. His recent death calls for at least gentle discussion of his shortcomings, since no good can be done by wounding his family with bitter criticism.

The fact is that Senator Quay, to whose funeral the President of the United States and others sent flowers, simply represented the average able American politician.

His career as a politician, treating national affairs as a question of profit and looking upon a republican form of government and the mass of the voters as means to financial ends, DOES NOT REALLY SHOCK THE BODY OF THE PEOPLE.

We shall have honest politics and honest politicians when we ourselves become more honest. Our feeling toward the political trickster now is a feeling of good-natured indifference, or even admiration, like the feeling of the fishing town for the old-time smuggler, or the feeling of the peasant for the dashing highwayman.

Some of us are Republicans, some of us are Democrats. Some of us belong to the ridiculous and laughable class that actually think for themselves, and therefore have no standing or influence at all.

We are very apt to look with approval upon our party leaders, IF THEY WIN.

The newspapers every day interview and quote with great respect politicians of both parties that would be in jail if the laws against bribery and political dishonesty in general were really enforced.

We have men striving for, or holding, the highest offices, and of these men it is known that rank corruption put them in office or wants them in office.

The question of filling an important judgeship often comes down to a struggle between two great corporations as to which shall have its man on the bench.

The Western Union officials will tell you, with a smile, that the Pennsylvania Railroad beat them in Pennsylvania, BECAUSE IT OWNS THE JUDGES THERE.

Every politician who knows anything will tell you that to "talk of pure politics is foolish, childish prattle."

If they want to praise another politician, they will say, "He doesn't take anything himself;" they will add, as a matter of course, "Of course, he has to let others take it, or he couldn't stay in politics."

The average politician takes political dishonesty for granted. What is more disgraceful and discouraging, he looks upon apparent honesty as one of three things—hypocrisy, idiocy, or proof of an ulterior motive.

A political boss who finds that he can't bribe a man says to his agents, "Find out what he wants, and we'll see if we can give it to him."

It is taken for granted that a man who refuses a certain sum of money as an inducement to act dishonestly either wants a larger sum of money or wants something else more important to him than money.

The newspapers quote with deference the opinions of professional politicians, while every editor and reporter on the newspaper knows the men quoted to be corrupt. And the voters support and re-elect men whose corruption has been proved.

A man can deliver himself body and soul to the scoundrels who own the Gas Trust without necessarily giving up political ambition. A legislator can cast every vote against the interests of those who elected him and be elected to do the same thing again.

Our politics is corrupt because our national sense of political honesty is corrupt or indifferent.

We have got to heal ourselves, as a people, of selfish indifference to public matters before we can ask any better conduct from selfish politicians, to whom public affairs simply mean a livelihood.

Little Editorials from the People.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN welcomes its growing army of correspondents, who write their views on the many questions in which they are interested, but for the sake of all, and in order to give the hundreds who write to it a chance, it is requested that all make their "little editorials" very brief. Letters of from 100 to 200 words will speedily appear. Longer ones must wait, and are likely never to see the light.

OPPOSES TWO PROPOSED LAWS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

There are two measures before the Legislature that should be killed and buried so deep that they will stay buried—the proposed Sunday law and the enlargement of the Suffolk court house.

As a taxpayer I protest in the strongest terms against using the public money to give the lawyers and judges more luxury. They have enough already. The proposed Sunday law is an insult to the Almighty and the enlightened judgment of the people, and as the AMERICAN has taken the lead in representing the people it should use all its power to kill such bad propositions.

WOMEN AND SMOKERS' SEATS.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Why isn't it possible to make women understand that the last three seats on open cars are reserved for smokers?

I don't complain of women who take those seats when the forward seats are filled, but of those who deliberately butt in, when there is plenty of room in the front. Women as a rule don't like to have smoke blown at them. I, for one, will avoid annoying a woman in this way if I can. When, however, women bring the discomfort upon themselves by lack of judgment it is time they were made to understand that they alone can remedy the situation. JEROME EDWARDS.

Everett, Mass.

TRANSFERS TO NEEDHAM.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

A fresh illustration of overriding the people's rights is being given by the Newton & Boston Street Railway Company, which recently petitioned the Railroad Commissioners to allow it to cease giving transfers from or to Needham on the Waltham and South Framingham lines. This company has operated for about ten years and has not been able to pay dividends.

Fine management, isn't it; with all of the trade it has had, and the trade it would have had if it gave the people proper service—which is also due to the same reason. But, as usual, the Commissioners decide in favor of a corporation, and the citizens have to stand for it, or at least the company thinks they have.

Is it not these things, occuring every day in our little cities and towns, that, growing to be great monopolies, threaten the destruction of our country? Is it not these things which, unmolested by the people, furnish subjects for the editorials which appear time and again in the BOSTON AMERICAN, warning the people and advising them to wake up? Where are our officials? If there is any way that this company's franchise can be taken from it, that should be done; and it should be given to somebody else. There is a company not far away that has offered its services to Newton and Needham, and if it were given a location it would soon give proper accommodations. NEWMAN H. BRANT.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Just as every child puzzles his parent and his pastor at some period by the query, "Who made God?" so periodically is society puzzled by the following query:

Man made society with woman's help, and together they formulated its laws. But both frequently rebel at these self-imposed restrictions and regulations.

Here is the question:

> Why isn't a good man justified in marrying a fallen woman?
>
> Judging by the ethics of society, such an act is invariably to his discredit. Doesn't he deserve credit above and here on earth for reclaiming the woman he loves from a hopeless life, provided she wishes to become better? Social ostracism, I know, is the price they must afterward pay. The decision of man; not God.

Since it was man himself who first started the idea that woman was forever "lost" if she erred through the emotions or the passions, and "saved" if she possessed no other virtue but chastity, it would seem that he has the right to overrule his own law, should he wish to do so, and take to wife the woman whose "fall" some man has brought about.

Yet having built his wall, and society having barbed it at the top, it proves to be a perilous, or at least uncomfortable, undertaking, when he attempts to scale it.

Not long ago I heard an intelligent and broad-minded man assert as a fact that no woman who had erred, from whatever cause or combination of causes, could afterward, however perfectly mated and married, become the mother of moral, well balanced and finely organized children.

Demanding proof of this remarkable statement, I was left with only the speaker's assertion and conviction. Yet some of the most useful and notably worthy people of the world have been branded by society as "illegitimate," and many instances can be found of noble wives and excellent mothers of good children who have risen out of the ashes of error to new birth of pure womanhood.

At the same time, in every social circle in the land, can be found spotless mothers of reckless children who have inherited and cultivated the father's vices.

There is one reason why it is more difficult for a man to reclaim an erring woman than for a woman to reclaim an erring man.

Because of the two codes of morals man has made for the two sexes, the woman who falls usually loses her self-respect sooner than does man, and falls to a lower depth of mental abasement.

She becomes more reckless, and it is more difficult for her to reform. The laws of the world render the undertaking peculiarly painful, and she frequently returns to her old life of folly in despair, when all her aspirations and inclinations are for a better course of conduct.

There is no doubt regarding a man's ability to utterly forget his early follies in the wholesome happiness of a peaceful and pure home life. They become as intangible to his memory as the nightmare of last year's sleep.

This is rarely possible to the feminine mentality. She dwells upon her mistakes, and broods over them until they sear her soul. But this is due to education, not to temperament. The best thing for a man to do who contemplates marrying and reforming a repentant woman is to take her to new scenes and surround her with new friends and to let the mantle of silence cover her past. In no way should the subject be referred to after he makes the woman his wife, and by every act and word should he endeavor to build a new life for her and to obliterate the old from her thoughts. Unless he can do this he would better not attempt to achieve the impossible, or to force the world to accept her. And to live socially ostracised in the world is to aggravate the canker of memory to a virulent cancer, which destroys happiness.

Has Human Nature Changed in 2,000 Years?

BY HERBERT N. CASSON.

Were the men who lived two thousand years ago very different from Boston men of to-day?

When a little child was kidnapped in ancient times, did the whole city help the mother in her search?

When a rich and respectable Roman was discovered to be hand in hand with low gamblers, did the general public despise him as they do now?

Were the men in Greece fond of bragging? Did the women gossip and buy pretty dresses? Did the children bully their parents? Did the working people get plenty of good advice and small wages?

Read these sayings of the ancient Grecians and judge for yourselves. It seems to me that though they had no railroads, no skyscrapers, no steamships, no machinery, no newspapers and no baseball two thousand years ago, they were wonderfully like us in many ways:

The most changeable things in the world are the course of waters and the humor of women.—Pittacus.

Love your friends with discretion and consider it possible that they may some day become your enemies.—Bias.

Good men are very rare; bad men and fools are innumerable.—Bias.

It is hope that flatters men most; gain that pleases them most, and loss of fortune that is hardest to bear.—Bias.

Before strangers a man should neither caress nor blame his wife, for by so doing he shows either his weakness or his folly—Cleobulus.

The tongue is the best and the worst thing that we possess.—Anacharsis.

Markets are places which men have established to deceive one another.—Anacharsis.

A man is a child till the age of twenty, a youth till the age of forty, a man at sixty and an old man at eighty. —Pythagoras.

If you want to write a book that shall have a great reputation, write one that no one can understand.—Heraclitus.

We should respect our enemies, for they are the first to perceive and to make known our faults.—Antisthenes.

When the people elect public officials they do not think first of their ability to govern; all they think of is to elect them.—Antisthenes.

If you wish to know the difference between a learned man and an ignorant man, dress them both alike and send them among strangers.—Aristippus.
